ASKS DATA ON NEEDY FUNDS

Mayor Nichols today notified the Overseers of the Public Welfare to rescind its decision cutting $1 from the weekly allowances of dependent poor families. He told the overseers to send him a statement of the additional amount of money needed to pay allowances in full for the remainder of the year and stated that he would provide the funds by transfer from other city funds.

Boston City Councillors today took action to halt the slashing of $1 a week from allowances to the dependent poor of the city, a cut which was put into effect by Overseers of Public Welfare for the purpose of saving a meagre $6,000 between now and January 1.

A special meeting of the City Council was demanded for Friday to launch concerted action against the cutting of allowances and also against the stoppage of the practice, heretofore followed by the overseers, of granting part-time employment to unemployed heads of worthy families.

Councillors and others at City Hall joined with scores of other men, prominent now or in the past in Boston official life, including two ex-Mayors, in denouncing the slashed doles in Winter, with snow covering the ground, cold weather prevailing and Christmas approaching.

PRESIDENT DECLARES FOR STRONG AIR FLEET

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Declaring that the law must be vindicated, President Coolidge today in his annual budget message to Congress, demanded $30,000 000 to enforce prohibition next year.

The President couched in three brief sentences the most outspoken declaration he has ever made of the government's purpose to rout the bootleg trade and make the nation dry.

The Drys, in joy, the Wets, in sorrow, construed his statements as an outright commendation of prohibition itself.

This is what he said on the subject:—

"Whatever is necessary to put

DENBY CALLED IN OIL TRIAL AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Edwin S. Denby, who as Secretary of the Navy approved the oil leases of 1922, was called as a defense witness today in the Fall-Doheny oil conspiracy trial.

Denby resigned under fire during the Senate oil inquiry.

He testified today that shortly after he entered the Harding Cabinet in March 1921, he was advised that the naval oil lands in California were being drained by private wells near the rim of the public domain.

"I was very much disturbed by the situation," he said.

He did not know from whom this advice came.

His first move, he said, was to solicit the cooperation of Secretary Fall of the Interior Department.

"I told him of the difficulties I saw and asked him if his department could give us any help," said Denby.

"What did Fall say?" asked defense counsel.

"He said his department had all the work it could handle; but he would be glad to do what he could."

DR. WALSH GUILTY ON 2 COUNTS

Dr. Thomas E. Walsh, South End physician, is guilty of both conspiracy and [illegible] surgery in connection with the death of Edith L. Greene, "paper box" victim of last Summer.

This was the verdict of the Suffolk County Court jury, returned at 5 a. m. today after nearly 19 hours of deliberations, broken only by brief recesses for meals.

The jury received the case at 10:20 a. m. yesterday, and its deliberations lasted throughout afternoon, evening, night and early morning. Throughout the night Dr. Walsh and his wife, who had been a defendant but was acquitted by directed verdict, kept vigil.

Mrs. Walsh accompanied her husband to the courtroom when it was reported the jury had agreed, and, despite her anxiety, kept giving little encouraging nods to her husband as the jury was being polled.

At the word "guilty," coming from the lips of the foreman, Mrs. Walsh gave a little gasp of dismay, her face whitened, and she sank back in her seat in what appeared to be verging on collapse. Tears welled up in her eyes at this deathknell to her hopes.

But she quickly recovered and moved swiftly to the side of Dr. Walsh to pat his arm and give him

LETTERS TO MA REVEAL MILLIE'S LOVE FOR SALM

New York, Dec. 8.—Letters written by the Countess Salm to her mother, referring to Count Salm in the most endearing terms, were introduced today in the separation suit of Count Salm against his wife, the former Millicent Rogers, daughter of Henry H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company.

The letters written by the Countess just prior to the birth of her child, were presented by the plaintiff as indicating that the Countess intended to return to her husband after their child was born.

"I love him too much and want to keep him from being miserable," one letter said. "I mustn't let him work. When I go back I will never leave

OBJECTS TO U. S. PAYING JOHN COOLIDGE'S GUARD

Washington, Dec. 8 (I.N.S.).—A protest against the expenditure of government funds to maintain a secret service man with John Coolidge, son of the President, a student at Amherst, was made by Representative Byrns (D.) of Tennessee during hearings on the treasury and postoffice appropriation bill, which was laid before the House today.

Ed Starling, assigned to guard young Coolidge, draws $3,700 annually and $6 per day allowances.

"I doubt the wisdom of detailing a man paid out of the funds of the treasury to act as a companion to the son of the President," said Byrns. "I think that is going too far."

Byrns has frequently attacked alleged "White House extravagance."

"DEAD" MAN WALKS INTO BRIDGEPORT COURT

through the fire and rescued her brother, Robert Otter, sixty-five. He slung Otter over his shoulder and carried him to safety, his own coat being singed as he dashed through the flames.

TAKEN TO STREET.

Kane then raced into the adjoining house, where the family of Henry James was found huddled on the second floor, unable to find the stairways owing to dense smoke. Grasping Games by the hand and ordering the others to clasp hands behind them, Kane led the family of eight to the street.

The injured woman was taken to City Hospital and the others cared for by neighbors. Because of the congested tenement district fear was felt that the fire would spread. The house was nearly destroyed and police are investigating to ascertain the cause.

Timely discovery of smoke rising to the fourth floor chambers by Miss Beatrice Doherty, a maid, brought help to the four-story brick dwelling at No. 317 Beacon street in time to save three other maids and the owner, Mrs. Elliott W. Pratt, 82 years old.

TELEPHONED ALARM.

Patrolman Patrick Reagan carried out Mrs. Pratt from her second floor room and helped get out the maids, Miss Doherty, Miss Isabelle Lee and Miss Theresa O'Reagan. Miss Doherty, after telephoning the alarm, returned to arouse the other occupants.

The flames had burned upward from the basement through several floors before the fire was discovered. Smoke also filled the building at No. 319 Beacon street, occupied by a commercial school, and Patrolman Albert McArdle assisted out the principal, Mrs. M. V. Fowler, and several students.

The fire started in the basement from an undetermined cause. Damage was estimated at $15,000.

Awakened by their terrier, Anna DeCormis, thirteen, and her sister, Constance, eight years old, of No. 321 Beacon street, ran to the street in fright when they saw there was a fire next door.

James G. Deviney of Malden, one of the five signers of the petition alleging gross irregularities in the financial report of the Republican State committee, today withdrew his name from the list of complainants.

Secretary of State Frederic W Cook is doubtful if the name can be withdrawn in view of the fact that the signatures were attested.

"DIDN'T HAVE TO WORK."

"I am sure no one could make me as contented as he has and that is saying a lot," said another letter which was presented by the plaintiff as having been written by Countess Salm and referring to the Count.

"He has never been made to work and he never should be," the Countess wrote in another letter to her mother, "but he has been a great sport about it. He has absolutely won, hands down."

Count Salm took the stand and told of his rapid romance, stating that he came to America in March, 1923, met Millicent Rogers in October of the same year and married her in January of the following year.

COUNT TELLS OF BREAK.

Asked if the parents of his bride were informed of the marriage, Count Salm replied:

"She didn't want to tell them. I tried to persuade her to, but she wouldn't."

Count Salm then told of the final disclosure to the parents of the bride of their marriage, of a consequent break in relations between the Countess Salm and her parents, and of the departure of the Count and Countess for Europe.

The Countess Salm was not in the courtroom.

Dr. Walsh Found Guilty on Both Counts

what encouragement she could in his hour of bitter disappointment.

Dr. Walsh appeared somewhat nervous as the jury was polled. His face showed haggard in the pale yellow electric light from his all-night vigil as he waited, standing, to hear his fate from the lips of the foreman.

Through the long night hours Dr. Walsh had waited for this hour with mingling hope and fear. The strain had been great and he showed it. As the weary night slowly ebbed, his hope appeared to be increasing as rumors crept about that the jurors were hopelessly deadlocked.

Once, at one a. m., the jurors came in and asked for instructions. These instructions were whether they could report a verdict on one indictment and inability to disagree on another.

The court, first thanking them for the care with which they were deliberating, combined with long hours, requested that they return to the jury room and make one final attempt to agree on a verdict on the other indictement.

This they did, and with complete success. Shortly before 5 o'clock they sent word they had agreed, and Judge Wilford Gray was notified in his chambers. Court was convened, the jury was brought in, and Dr. Walsh was called upon to stand.

The defendant physician gazed upon the jurors and the jurors gazed upon the defendant physician.

"How say you, guilty or not guilty," droned the voice of the court clerk.

"Guilty," was the solemn response of the foreman.

Dr. Walsh's eyes flickered, his eyelids quivered, and his mouth compressed tightly. The color in his face came and went. He started to clear his throat, and then his eyes sought his wife's figure.

The case was over. The last chapter in the "Edie" Greene tragedy had been written. The finis will be signed when the sentence is pronounced.

BIG FIRM'S BUSINESS IS TO SMUGGLE RUM INTO U. S.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The Consolidated Exporters, Inc., a British Columbia firm, is a $1,200,000 corporation organized solely to supply liquor to American bootleggers. It has agents in the Pacific Coast cities of the United States. It operates five ocean-going vessels to deliver its stuff.

Its books are destroyed at regular periods to forestall attempts by the American Treasury Department to collect income taxes from its branch agents. All this was admitted by R. Swanson, president of the concern, in testifying yesterday before the royal commission investigating liquor smuggling. Swanson is under indictment in San Francisco.

DELANEY READY FOR SHARKEY

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Humbert J Fugazy announced today that Jack Delaney, world's light-heavyweight champion, had agreed to meet Jack Sharkey of Boston in the match which the conqueror of Harry Wills is under contract to fight for Fugazy before next February 1.

The agreement between Fugazy and Pete Reilly, manager of Delaney, was reached yesterday, the promoter said.

While no effort has been made as yet to come to terms with Sharkey, Fugazy declared that the contract binding the Boston slugger to meet any opponent chosen by the promoter had been signed to a long-term contract to appear under Rickard's promotion against Jim Maloney of Boston, Harry Persson, Swedish champion, and Paolino Uzcudun of Spain in an elimination tourney to determine a challenger for Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion.

There is hardly a chance that Sharkey will meet Delaney, according to Johnny Buckley, manager of the Boston heavyweight. Buckley says that his contract with Fugazy stipulates that he provide an opponent and suitable place to hold the bout before February 1.

"To date Fugazy has been unable to provide the place," said Buckley. "Sharkey has signed with Rickard for a series of elimination bouts to be held next year and I do not believe Fugazy is really serious. A Delaney-Sharkey bout would be an ideal match from any angle as Jack is sure he can beat the light heavyweight champion.

"Fugazy has been trying ever since Sharkey defeated Wills to get an indoor place for the next appearance of Sharkey, but as far as I know there is none available that would seat enough spectators to make the match a financial success. It is a "natural" outdoor show."

Vienna, Dec. 8 (I.N.S.).—The Balkan cauldron is seething again with completion of an Italo-Albanian pact and the resignation of the Jugo-Slavian Cabinet.

Already Jugo-Slavia is turning to France and negotiations are said to be under way for a pact between those nations for mutual aid in the event either nation is attacked. There are also reports of efforts for pacts between Jugo-Slavia and Hungary.

Reports from Belgrade indicate the question of the Italo-Albanian pact may be brought before the League of Nations, on the ground that it is in contravention to the spirit of the league.

CALL 3 WITNESSES FOR ACCUSED COAST GUARD

Three character witnesses were called to the witness stand today as the defense, in court martial proceedings against Robert E. Taylor, Coast Guard officer, charged with rum-running, opened its case.

The three witnesses were Russell W. Threasher, commanding the 138; Ernest V. Hyatt, commander of the 125, and Carl Halwartz, executive officer at Base 5. All three men testified they knew the defendant as an honest man and had never seen evidences of his being engaged in illicit rum traffic. Winfield S. Nevins, chief gunner's mate at Base 5, testified that Doten, the government's star witness, and Wilson, the mysterious "agent," were "chummy" and had plenty of money.

LOWDEN COMES OUT FOR PRICE-FIXING

Chicago, Dec. 8 (I.N.S.).—Frank O Lowden, boomed as the farm candidate for President in 1928, today came out flatly for price fixing as a solution of the farm problem, on the heels of the President's warning against such a policy in his annual message to Congress. Speaking before the convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, he said:

"Our rural civilization is in a perilous state. Our nation cannot long survive the decay of its agriculture.

"It is evident that in the interest of the consumer as well as of the producer, we should find some means of stabilizing prices of farm products."

BOSTON GIRLS FAVOR TOGS IN SWIMMING

The decision of Mrs. Clemington Corson, first mother to swim the English Channel, that she would not enter the Catalina Island deep sea marathon, Jan. 13, because other women swimmers would not wear bathing suits has caused much discussion among Greater Boston girl swimmers.

Some agree with Mrs. Corson, that ten pounds of axle grease does not sufficiently cover a woman swimmer. Others say swimming in axle grease is immodest. Still others say it gives the swimmer an advantage over those who wear suits.

Many of the Greater Boston swimmers say it is a matter for the individual to decide. The Catalina Island swim will be one of the most important swimming events of the Winter. A cash prize of $25,000 has been offered. Yet Mrs. Corson, whose record surpasses that of any other woman swimmer entered in the race, refused to swim because of the rule allowing contestants without suits. Here is what several Greater Boston girls say:

MISS PRIMA CORDANI of Somerville, who is one of the active swimmers in that city, says, "I am not at all in favor of no bathing suit. However, if Mrs. Schoemmel feels that using a suit would seriously handicap her chance for a victory while swimming, it should not keep her from competing."

MISS KATHERINE MEARLS of South Boston says, "I believe all women swimmers should wear a swimming suit. It is unfair to the other swimmers to have some competitor clad in grease, and it does not look good from a moral standpoint.'

MAN FOR SALE AT $3,000 TO GOOD GIRL

For Sale:

A budding Irving Berlin, not quite so famous as Irving Berlin, but a full-fledged song writer, nevertheless, and one who does not chew, smoke, drink or stay out at night.

The price must be at least $3,000. In the event of competition, the highest bidder will win. And most important of all the purchaser must be a girl who leans toward a state of matrimony.

The unusual and startling offer was revealed today in a plea made by Albert Villa, 22, railroad inspector by day and music composer at night, who lives with his parents and his four sisters and three brothers at No. 50 Stoughton avenue, Readville.

"I want to sell myself to a girl for $3,000 or whatever I can get," he said.

There's no joke about this offer. I'm very serious. The reason? I'll be frank about it and tell you the story.

"First of all," he said, "I am ambitious. I don't hang around pool room like a great many young fellows. I have no bad habits, in fact I devote all my spare time, which is the evening, to song writing.

"I need money to promote my compositions. I have discovered that considerable capital is required to be a successful songwriter. I'll be frank about the matter. I want a girl with money, but love too must be a party to the transaction."

Although Villa is the author of many songs, among them "Not So Long Ago," and, "Golden Castles in the Air," he said that royalties are slow and that the only road to success is a "girl with money."

ANTI-LOVE GIRL MOTHER OF 2

Los Angeles, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Sally Long, formerly of the Follies, who was insured by Flo Zeigfeld for $100,000 against the possibility of her falling in love or marrying, already was wedded when the policy was taken out.

This was disclosed when it became known that she has been granted a divorce from Leo Bovette Tuey, whom she married in Kansas City in 1916, when she was fifteen years old. She is playing in motion pictures here.

The divorce case revealed that Mrs. Tuey has two children.

She explained the secrecy surrounding her marriage and the divorce several months ago on the ground that if her associates knew she was married and had two children they would regard her as older than she is and it would prove a handicap to her career.

$5,000 FUND TO HUNT ACCUSED GIRL SLAYER

Prairie Du Chien, Wis., Dec. (A.P.)—A movement to raise $5,00 for the capture of Erdman Olson accused slayer of Clara Olson, his betrayed farm girl sweetheart, has been started by Kickapoo Valley farmers.

The money will be used to hire private detectives to trace the movements of Olson.

Stepper Steps Up ~ To Win Stepping Fame

Ruth Fuller (left), Radcliffe College graduate and well known athlete, claims she is the champion stepper anywhere. She seps up, not out. At the right is Helen McCarth, Brookline swimming instructor, who was defeated in a race up and down Custom House tower, 25 stories "each way." Miss Fuller's time was 10 minutes, 51 and 3-5 seconds. Samuel Cutler, an Amherst student, who timed them, is in the middle.

BANKER VICTIM OF MONOXIDE

Springfield, Dec. 8.—The automobile's deadly carbon monoxide took a second probable victim in two days in the Springfield district today, when Clifford E. Davis, assistant cashier of the Springfield National Bank, was rendered unconscious in his garage while thawing the radiator of his machine.

Davis who lived at No. 135 Carver street, rented a garage at No. 130 Woodlawn street, an adjoining thoroughfare.

Woodlawn street neighbors heard an automobile motor chugging for several hours early today and saw the light burning continuously in the garage. Investigating, they found Davis crumpled in a motionless heap on the floor. At the Wesson Memorial Hospital it was said the bank officer was not expected to live.

CYCLE OFFICER'S SON INJURED BY ICICLE

Lawrence, Dec. 8.—William H. Ludwig, Jr., son of Motorcycle Officer and Mrs. William H. Ludwig No. 30 South street, sustained painful injuries to his head yesterday afternoon when he was struck a falling icicle while on his way his classes at the Weatherbee School.

Although stunned by the force of the blow of the descending icicle, William managed to continue on his way to school where first aid treatment was administered and he was later removed to his home.

GIRLS, LEGS MEAN MOST! WOMAN DOC, 102, SAYS SO

Washington, Dec 8.—Listen, girls! Cultivate your legs. It is goid looking legs that mean most to a woman in this world.

You can take this advice on the word of a woman who has had exactly 102 years in which to think the matter over. She is Dr. Marie Charlotte De Goliere Davenport, from Vienna, who has documentary proof she has lived beyond the century mark. Said this flapper great-grandmother.

"Of course, if a girl has lost her good looking legs, the next best thing she can do is to cultivate her mind. But remember, it's the legs that count, over education, intellect and culture."

Dr. Davenport, visiting in Washington, is accompanied by her husband, forty-seven years her junior. One would never suspect her age, for she sees without the aid of glasses, hears perfectly and displays marked vitality.

Death Dodges U. P.

New York, Dec. 8.—The Union Pacific, which had no passengers killed last year, has been awarded the E. H. Harriman gold medal for conspicuous work in preventing accidents.

ASK U. S. TO PAY TWO BILLIONS IN CLAIMS

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—With the convening of Congress the Court of Claims began its new term at which it will have before in nearly $2,000,000,000 of claims against the government, arising principally out of the activities of the United States in the World War.

Trese suits have increased from 733 cases involving $197,316,447.01 on July 1, 1921, to approximately 3,000 cases involving $1,815,975,412.88 on November 15, 1926. The court during the year ending June 30, 1926, decided 1,348 suits in which claims against the government amounting to $70,377,266.58 were made.

The suits filed involve almost every possible claim that can be made against the government. One inventor claims $1,000,000 for the little pocket books of stamps which are sold at every postoffice. Over a million dollars is asked for infringement in the manufacture of torpedoes and $30,000,000 for radio apparatus.

Other claims are made for injuries to persons and property by mail and army trucks and reimbursement is claimed by farmers for destruction of land and crops by alighting of plane.

The owner of intoxicating liquor whose supply has been illegally confiscated by prohibition officers seeks indemnity in money damages. One woman seeks to hold the government liable "for permitting the licentious sale of intoxicating liquor" to her husband.

In some of the suits the government is not only successful in defeating the plaintiff's claim, but succeeds in recovering upon a counter claim. The United States Treasury has been augmented recently by collections of such judgments ahounting to approximately $600,000.

BRITAIN TELLS SPAIN TO DROP TANGIER QUESTION

Madrid, Dec. 8 (I.N.S.).—Great Britain has sent Spain a firm note, stating that she does not feel inclined to discuss the Tangier question at this time.

The efforts of General DeRivera to reopen the question of administration of Tangier and to secure a larger measure of control for Spain appear to have been effectually blocked by the British attitude, at least for the time being.

VICTOR PEOPLE IN $40,000,000 STOCK DEAL

New York, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The Victor Talking Machine Company, which spread its trademark of a listening dog all over the world, will soon hear the voice of a new master after having successfully met radio competition for its present shareholders.

A group of New York bankers headed by Speyer & Co. and J. and W. Seligman today held an option on a controlling interest of common stock that calls for a possible outlay of $40,250,000 for 350,000 shares of common stock at $115, well above par.

Eldridge R. Johnson, president of the company, who is said to control 245,600 shares, has granted the option, saying that he was greatly influenced by the condition of his health.

Mr. Johnson specified that minority stockholders should be allowed to turn in their shares at the same price if they desire. Mr. Johnson's holdings were on deposit in the banks today to bind the agreement.

The Victor Company, with a plant at Camden, N. J., which covers six city blocks, and a large one in Oakland, Cal., maintained uninterrupted payment of dividends on its commo stock until last year, when rad competition caused a suspension.

Through an agreement with th Radio Corporation of America on the production of an improved phot ograph, however, business picked u and payments were resumed la August.

CLIVE SCORING IN FARCE AT COPLEY

An amusing example of farce comedy that has kept London playgoers happy for two years is now having similar effect on audiences at the Copley.

Nan Marriott-Watson

"Tons of Money" is the reason for the risibles and the principal provoker of the current cast is Director E. E. Clive himself, in person and in effigy. As a "dueced clever old chapple, y'know," he struggles for full possession of the "tons of money" obligingly and farcically bequeathed him by an expiring brother, and there follows the curse of wealth for the pyramiding mixups.

Pinch-hitting for no matter whom of his company, Mr. Clive never fails to knock a home run for his audience whenever he puts himself up to bat and his resumption of lead-off man in the Copley team at present is being met with all the approval bestowed on the heaviest of hitters.

In fact, Clive is "the show." His painful perturbation when the scriptural requirements of the piece arrange a series of violent "deaths" for him precipitates it's own hilarity, but overwhelming merriment follows in an ensuing assortment of transmigrations, transgressions and metamorphoses.

No sooner is he through with Aubrey Allington than he is George Maitland, or the Reverend Brown, or the newest Channel swimmer . . . . . or all three at once. Needless to say, the audience has a good time all the way through.

Not too far behind the rapidly changing Mr. Clive, Nan Marriott-Watson toils artistically as his married wife whose task it is to organize his various subterfuges. Others who lend a hand are Elspeth Dudgeon, Norman Cannon, May Ediss, C. Wordley Hulse and Alan Mowbray.

COL. MARSHALL WILL HEAD SALLIES IN N. E.

This announcement was made at a testimonial dinner tendered Commissioner and Mrs. McIntyre at the Copley-Plaza Hotel by 100 prominent business and professional men of New England. Ex-Governor Channing H. Cox presided as toastmaster.

Commissioner McIntyre becomes territorial commander of the army in the South after January 1.

Bay State Man to Tap 41,650 Sugar Trees bv Pine Line

Bellows Falls, Vt., Dec. 8 (I.N.S.).—The famous scene of the Vermont farmer trudging through snow buckets of maple sap hanging from his shoulders, will be a thing of the past if maturity come to the 41,650 maple trees of Frank W. Morrison, Worcester attorney, owner of a farm near here.

The lawyer has set out his trees in rows on hills. The Morrison plan is to tap the trees by direct pipe line to storage tanks in a maple sugar house near the base of the hills.

The trees are expected to start producing in twenty-five years.

The Three Women In President Wilson's Life

. . . The part played by each—the first Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Hulbert (Mrs. Peck), and Mrs. Galt, who became the second Mrs. Wilson—is told in the second chapter of "Secrets of the White House," by Elizabeth Jaffray, for 17 years housekeeper of the Executive Mansion, now appearing in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan. Three short paragraphs indicate the scope and sincerity of this second paper:

> "President Wilson, I am sure, loved the first Mrs. Wilson deeply and she was a wonderful mother, but her nature was limited. She was never the gay and amusing woman of the world.
> "To speak frankly, I think that Mrs. Hulbert—better known as Mrs. Peck—filled, for some years, this part of Mr. Wilson's life.
> "The last time Mrs. Hulbert was at the White House, following the death of the first Mrs. Wilson, I told her rather facetiously that these were her golden moments. She only smiled in answer."

These articles are not gossip or scandal. They are simple, courageous stories of the home side of the White House during four administrations. They tell the human side of four presidents—a story which gains in importance by the disclosure of what went on behind the closed doors and drawn shades. No doubt these articles may become historical documents. What would not historians give today for just such accounts of the White House during the days of Abraham Lincoln?

This, the outstanding feature of any present-day magazine, is published with no idea of sensation, but entirely in good taste, with the thought that this country is interested in—and entitled to know—the big and little things about her Presidents and their lives.

Mrs. Hulbert and Mr. Wilson when he was President of Princeton University

Mussolini is a Little Fellow—Only 5 feet, 7 inches tall . . . He's what IRVIN S. COBB calls a BIG LITTLE man. Cobb was never more surprised in his life than he was when recently he met the dictator in Rome. And so he proceeded to write a real article which gives a real picture of the most interesting personality in the world today. He—and we—were so anxious to give this pen portrait to the American public at once that the entire 6,000 words were cabled to New York in order to "make" the January issue.

A Romance from the Rim of Civilization

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

In the novelette "The Crippled Lady of Peribonka"—published complete in the January issue—this pastmaster of romance of the wilderness tells a drama of love that was willing to die for love's sake.

The Way to Meet the Best People in New York . . . Is to stay up all night, declares O. O. McIntyre, in a study of that enigma of today, the Night Club. Mr. McIntyre tells How Much You Pay in the Night Clubs and How Little You Get—how much you deserve the hail "Hello, Sucker!" with which the Girl Everybody Knows greets her patrons. If you've been one, you may wince, but you'll enjoy knowing how many others are members.

E. Phillips Oppenheim's New Mystery Stories

One of Mr. Oppenheim's astonishing mystery stories, written during the war, caused Germany to place a price upon his head. Now he has written a group of totally different detective stories. If you like swift action and a baffling surprise you'll enjoy "Three Birds With One Stone."

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM:

Mr. Maugham goes back to the mysterious Far East in one of the most powerful short stories he has ever written—"Footprints in the Jungle."

RING W. LARDNER:

Never has the keen humor of this unusual writer been more human, wiser, or more gloriously humorous than in his story, "Sun Cured."

KATHLEEN NORRIS:

Mrs. Norris gives an understanding picture of a simple Irish family and a Husband who imagined he was Boss in "Diplomacy Begins at Home."

ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE:

Mr. Roche gives a delightful answer to the old problem — was money made to spend or save?— in his deeply human story "A Very Wise Fool."

Also in January Cosmopolitan . . . "The Bacchante," A Novel of a Woman with a Devil in Her Soul, by Robert Hichens. A new novel by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, who wrote "The Little French Girl." Short Stories by Leonard Merrick, H. C. Witwer, Gouverneur Morris, Don Marquis . . . Features by George Ade, Charles Dana Gibson, O. O. McIntyre, Albert Payson Terhune . . . and many others.

It is because of outstanding features like these that 1,500,000 people buy Cosmopolitan . . . a 35c magazine . . . every month in preference to magazines that they can buy for 25c, 10c, or even only 5c.

With more than a million and a half circulation

The object of advertising is to sell goods—and make money for the advertiser.

The easiest way to accomplish this is to advertise to people with the following qualifications:

An active appreciation of things that make life worth living.
A desire to possess as many of these things as possible.
The means to gratify this desire.

Cosmopolitan offers advertisers just such an audience.

Cosmopolitan families—more than a million and a half of them—have these qualifications. They demonstrate it in many ways—none more forcefully than by the purchase of nearly a million copies of Cosmopolitan each month at the better class newsstands. For the retail price of Cosmopolitan is 35c, from ten to thirty cents higher than most magazines. Only people of discrimination and means pay this difference.

Advertising is most profitable when it reaches the right people in the places where the advertisers' goods are on sale.

Obviously, advertising cannot sell merchandise where there is none to sell: So, to be successful advertising must reach people who live where the advertised product is on sale.

Ninety percent of Cosmopolitan's families live where eighty percent of the nation's trading is done. If a Cosmopolitan family wants a product which is advertised in Cosmopolitan, they can get it without trouble, for they live where such products are invariably sold. The importance of this buying ease to successful advertising cannot be over-emphasized.

A Specific Instance:

An advertiser who used the columns of Cosmopolitan consistently in 1926 received $26 for each dollar invested. A very profitable sales record.

This is only one of many instances which prove the quality and responsiveness of the Cosmopolitan audience—which prove the ability of Cosmopolitan to sell goods and to make money for the advertiser.

COUNCIL TO ACT ON DOLE CUT

weather, families will shiver in unheated tenements, and several thousand women and children will be hungry if relief is not given immediately, it was declared.

Councillor John F. Dowd, representing a Roxbury district in which are many poor families, addressed a letter to Mayor Nichols requesting authorization for the special session of the City Council.

Mayor Nichols met the overseers in conference to discuss the necessity of their action and to consider remedies, while poor families in the West and South Ends, Roxbury, the North End, and other sections were uttering vigorous protests to the change which cut their already slim allowance of $12 to $15 down by $1 in every case.

ASKS FOR $100,000.

Councillor Dowd asked an appropriation of $100,000 for the relief of the poor, regardless of any policy of economy or lack of funds in the city treasury.

"If the cry is 'economy,' I should like to ask why the public welfare department itself is paying 63 to 65 cents a pound for butter when good butter can be obtained at least 10 cents cheaper," said Dowd. "This is only one example of waste."

He wrote to Mayor Nichols:

"In view of the situation among the worthy poor of the city of Boston, occasioned by the depletion of funds available for relief, and in order that suffering may be reduced to a minimum, I respectfully urge you to call a special meeting of the Boston City Council for Friday afternoon, Dec. 10, for the purpose of transferring $100,000 from other department funds for use by the Overseers of the Public Welfare.

CALLS CUT OUTRAGE.

"Personally I feel and am of the opinion that Your Honor also feels that it is an outrage to not only cut allowance to the poor of the city but also to stop unemployment pay to those heads of families unable to find work at this time of year.

"I represent a district where many needy families reside and if immediate relief is not offered they will suffer greatly in the next few weeks.

"I also desire to call to Your Honor's attention that canned goods and oatmeal do not provide fuel and clothing to keep the children warm.

"I most respectfully suggest that you act on this motion immediately."

Dowd explained that until recently the city gave work three days a week, at cutting wood or some similar occupation, to unemployed heads of families. The pay in these cases was $12 to $18 for relief of the family of the man given employment.

RAPS WELFARE BOARD.

"I intend to do my share to restore the employment feature of the Welfare Board so families can be properly cared for in the middle of Winter," he said. "There are more than twenty applications a day from my district alone, and the way the board has handled some of these cases, giving out a few cans of eatables and a few pounds of oatmeal, is a travesty.

"There might just as well be no Welfare Board at all.

"Every dollar counts with families getting only $12 or $15 a week from the city. It means shoes, clothing, fuel. The city should hesitate a long time before cutting even a quarter or a dime from these allowances.

ANSWERS CARR.

"Chairman Carr of the Finance Commission, in criticising the decreased allowances in a statement in the newspapers, advises the Mayor to stop giving dinners to the City Council and such things. I don't know what he is talking about. I know of no dinner, to the Democratic members of the City Council, at any rate, and if there have been such dinners they must have been given secretly to some members, perhaps Republicans."

The slashed allowances resulted from a report by the overseers that their shortage for the current year would reach $200,000. They asked Mayor Nichols to provide this amount from other city funds and a compromise was reached whereby they got $150,000.

Members of Public Welfare Board Who Cut Dole

The Overseers of the Public Welfare (formerly Overseers of the Poor) who cut $1 from the weekly allowances to poor families in the city of Boston are as follows:

Simon E. Hecht.	Eva Whiting White.
Franklin P. Daly.	James J. Crowley.
Mrs. Margaret J. Gookin.	James H. Stone.
Horace Bronstein.	Mrs. Jeremiah J. Hurley.
Frank Leveroni.	Sophie M. Friedman.

How they were to cut down expenses $50,000 by saving $6,000 on poor doles and a few thousand dollars more in cessation of employment aid is a problem that City Hall officials were discussing today.

FORMER MAYOR CURLEY, father of the Mother's Aid Act—I think it an outrage to cut the allowances to the poor of the city. It was the greatest blessing that the women and children of Boston ever received when the Mother's Aid Act was passed.

It has not only been a blessing to the recipients, but a monument to the human side of municipal administration. The city should still continue to show the same generous humane manner towards the poor as it did in administering to them in the beginning.

The poor are not to blame. What of it if it does cost a little more. They are not to blame for industrial conditions throughout the country. The officials at Washington are to blame.

FITZGERALD ATTACKS IT

FORMER MAYOR FITZGERALD—A huge corporation like the city of Boston is not justified in the saving of $50,000 at the expense of the poor. It seems to me that perhaps the city might save the $50,000 by investigating some of the cases in hand and sorting out the worthy cases from the unworthy ones, but, at any rate, no deserving poor family should suffer.

There is nothing in the living conditions that warrants such a cut. Food, fuel and clothing are still high. Winter is here. The poor children need to be clothed and fed properly. In my opinion the cut is unwarranted.

CHARLES L. CARR, Chairman of the Boston Finance Commission—If the Overseers of the Poor made a proper investigation of all the cases that have come under its consideration and weeded out all those unworthy of receiving aid from the city, it would result in that department's being able to keep within its annual appropriation.

We have a paid worker continuously examining cases at the administration building of the overseers and it has been an enormous task to study each case from the beginning, but the worker has been able to point out numerous cases which should be closed and in some instances the recommendations have been carried out.

SIMON E. HECHT, Chairman of the Overseers—The reason is a financial one. We needed $200,000 to finish the year and we were only able to get $150,000. That sum expended under the present situation would leave a deficit of $80,000 at the end of the year. We are taking the $150,000 recently granted to us which is in excess of the budget for the department and making it go as far as possible.

Cutting the dollar from the allowance of those receiving from $12 to $30 a week will not result in any suffering and furthermore it is no way permanent. It will be for a short period only, until January 1. This will enable us to meet demands with but slight inconvenience to those receiving aid.

MRS. MARGARET J. GOOKIN of Roxbury: "I do not care to be interviewed."

JAMES H. STONE: "I don't care to make an individual statement. If any statement is made, it should come from the board as a whole."

FRANK LEVERONI: "I don't care to be quoted as an individual member."

SOPHIE M. FRIEDMAN: "I prefer that any statement shall come from the chairman."

MRS. JEREMIAH J. HURLEY: "The board should speak as a whole on this matter."

The other overseers are Franklin P. Daly, Eva Whiting White, Morris Bornstein and James J. Crowley.

STOCKTON RAYMOND, general secretary of the Family Welfare Association—More old people are being cared for and there are more old people in need of aid without means of support and the Family Welfare is attempting to care for these aged adequately. The resulting burden on the treasury means the demand for more money.

More pressure is being placed on the social agencies to care for the health of the aged in addition to providing relief.

ROBERT W. KELSO, executive secretary for Council of Social Agencies: It seems to me that wholly aside from the matter of the city's indebtedness, it remains a fact that there is a very decided need of relief for the poor in Boston. My point of view is that if it is practicable to save on the budget the last place where such saving should take place should be money appropriated to relieve the sufferings of the unfortunate.

Loss of Dollar Keenly Felt by Hub's Poor

The cut of $1 in weekly doles to the poor of Boston ordered three weeks ago by the Board of Overseers of the Public Welfare has brought hardship and greater need to many families, the Boston Evening American learned following an investigation at some of the homes affected.

Here is a picture of conditions at several homes since the new ruling went into effect, as told to

BEN GERSHON,
Boston Evening American Staff Reporter.

"Coffee and bread—coffee and bread—that's all we've had for breakfast since they took that extra dollar away," wailed Mrs. Maria Antonetta Cassesi, invalid widow and mother of three, today, at her squalid tenement home at No. 15 North square. With her three little girls, Rose 11, Jennie 8, and Beatrice, 5, huddling close to her for warmth in a heatless and lamp-lighted room, she continued:

"I used to receive $16 a week and that was just enough to pay meagrely for our bare necessities of life. Now they took the $1 away and, with the $15 I have to pay $18 a month rent, and with the rest try to keep the wolf away from the door.

NEEDS THE DOLLAR.

"A dollar doesn't seem much to most folks but to my little family it is a whole lot. I have a weak heart and can't work. My children are all young and being healthy need a lot of food.

"I have been forced to vary the meals with a supper of bread and jelly. Then the babies say 'What else can we eat' and with a broken heart I say 'whatever you can find.'

"I certainly could use that extra dollar for lots of things. For instance, stockings for the girls, medicine for myself or else a little meat. I hope they realize what the extra amount means and give it back to us."

A tale of hard circumstances further straightened by loss of the extra dollar was unfolded at the home of Mrs. Ethel Kaplan, No. 9 Poplar street.

On the top floor of a dank West End tenement house, barred of light and sunshine, lives the widowed mother of four boys and a girl. She said:

RENT IS $27.

"My husband died five years ago of illness and left no insurance. I have faced the dismal world with a smile and thanks to the kindness of the City of Boston I have managed to look after the kiddies and myself.

"Taking away a dollar from the $15 I received each week was felt keenly in my home. It may surprise you but for $1 I can supply the family with meat for two days or bread for three days. Boys tear shoes quickly and my youngsters, even though poor, are no exception to the rule.

"I pay $27 a month rent—the children must have a home. The kiddies never have enough food and it breaks my heart to see them come in from school hungry. Do you think they'll give us back the extra money?"

Dear Anne:

Real Winter—real snow; overshoes and warm, woolly scarfs. An old fashioned Christmas season, when fur coats feel good and we lean toward the cozy, substantial things of life.

So Let's Go

First to Geo. L. Griffin & Son, Inc. (370 Washington Street) and take a look through the store and see what's going on in the way of fourteen karat solid gold values.

Third floor looks as if they were ready to equip a polar expedition, with every kind of a fur ever devised for the comfort and beauty of woman.

Muskrat coats with their soft brown skins perfectly matched for $195 and higher. Graceful, modish coats with slenderizing lines, yet defying the Winter winds. Then there are the silky black coats of seal dyed muskrat with squirrel or mink collars, black and glistening as a midnight sea bathed in moonlight. They average around $350. The curly caraculs in silvery gray, golden brown, or deep nut brown are among the most popular Winter coats, for they serve every purpose and are inexpensive. In fact, those of the caracul paws are only $157.50.

Downstairs on the second floor, there's a perfectly good sale going on in the cloth coats and the millinery. Hurrah! Those stunning hats which we admired so much earlier in the season are now $7.50 and $10. With the newest bright sparkling hats, the "fur coat" hats, selling at the $7.50 price, too.

Hosiery, silky, shimmery hosiery, is on this floor, too, at $1.35 and $1.95 a pair.

Now we must go, with a moment or two for the neckties downstairs, for she who passes up the George L. Griffin latest shipment of neckties will live to regret it and to retrace her steps, only to find the best ones are gone. Because they are not expensive, only around $1.00 and $1.50, and the most dignified stunning ones ever made of watered silk, moire silks and satins, in figures and stripes and the soft paisley patterns.

What D'you Suppose!

I was presented with a bottle of Nultrafleur at the bridge party last night. There, I'd written you what a darling dollar gift it was—that delightful perfume packed so artistically in its lavender box—and then I receive one as a bridge prize.

It only shows that one can never be quite the first to find a thing, for if it's good, somebody's bound to discover it, too. And Nultrafleur is good—so good that you sniff the back of your hand during the day to assure yourself its elusive flower fragrance is still there. And it always is, for although there's only one-third of an ounce in a bottle, it's so concentrated that one tiny touch brings the breath of roses, violets, hyacinths, jasmine and narcissus to linger with you all the day.

So, now I'm going to add it to my daily list and phone right in to the S. S. Pierce stores for two or three bottles, for if it made me happy to receive it last night, it will please others, too. And I can get it at any of the three S. S. Pierce stores.

Pillows! Puffy Pillows

The very essence of comfort and beauty, are at Catherine E. Kane's Youth Shop, on the second floor of the Little Building, 80 Boylston Street.

They have just come. I was aching to whisper a hint about them last week, but they hadn't arrived, and I didn't want you to be disappointed. Anyway, you'll love them, and you'll love the price, for they only cost from $2.50 to $5. Great soft taffeta pillows, all shirred and adorned with lovely flowers, in rose, gold, orchid and blue colors. Round, oblong, heart shaped and diamond shaped pillows. And pillows of velvet so big and comfy you'll purr with delight when the day's work is over and you curl down into them with your book.

You'll purr, too, when Catherine Kane shows you her new Christmas supply of frilly, silky, flowery undies, from $3 to $5, smart sporty hankies with hand rolled edges for 25c and 50c apiece. In fact, no one ever comes away from there without a general warm feeling of satisfaction and a bit of shopping well done.

Gracious! I'm

All out of breath, but all enthusiasm. Just as I was about to close this letter and say farewell, the news blew in that David Mendelsohn, Inc., has received a shipment of gorgeous imported bags from France, just too late for the wholesale trade, and is therefore forced to sell them at retail at the regular wholesale prices.

He is the importer of needlepoint chairs, over at 31 Bedford Street, near the corner, where it crosses Chauncy Street. So, of course, I flew over, for that's the kind of news you love. And, it's true. Better than true. He's positively sacrificing them at an absurdly low price. Marvelous bags of genuine cut steel, in the most intricate old world designs and soft colors. Sold at the wholesale price of $14.50 and thereabouts. You can get a $32.50 bag (retail price) for $17.50, a $40 one for $22.50.

And, Anne, they are exquisite. I never saw anything so lovely. On both silver and gilt frames, like the most wonderful tapestry, needlepoint, or royal oriental rugs, worked out in glittering beads. I thought I was happy before, but I know now, I'll never be truly happy until I get one.

See What's Happened

To our picture gallery. Kinky and Curly simply walked into the space and took possession. But they are too adorable and too absurd to be out in the cold hard world alone, so the Powers-That-Be said they could stay safe under the wing of your Priscilla—provided they made themselves useful.

Being useful, to them, simply means "going shopping again," so they will spend every waking hour searching the Boston shops for some special treasure to show you each Wednesday—if they are very good little girls.

Please Meet Molly

A most obedient, affectionate dog, a woolly dog with a cuddly, lovable disposition, who will tuck her head into her paws, or curl up into a little ball at the motion of your finger. Three fingers—really, for two go into the paws and one into her head, while her whole body slips over your hand.

She came from the London Harness Company, 60 Franklin Street, and cost $2.25. And I've discovered that the London Harness Company is a splendid place to buy gifts for children as well as for grown people. That is, if the children you know like blue Persian cats, big and bigger Molly dogs, jump ropes with painted handles, Mother Goose books and all kinds of drawing sets bound in shiny black enamel cloth covers. Or if they are like some youngsters I know who think a beautiful leather pencil case cram full of writing equipment is about the nicest personal gift there is. It has a fastener which slides around on grooves, Zipper effect, and shuts it up as tight as anything. These are $1.25 and $2.75.

Then there are pocket scopes for small boys, about big finger size, in leather cases, for $1.50, and for the real sportsman around six years old up to twelve, a set of golf stick in a bag of Scotch plaid canvas, bound in leather, with a pocket which holds two balls. In fact, if you wish to create in the children a preference for substantial and fine things, you'll find any number of delightful gifts for them in this shop.

Miss Wiggin Is

One in a million, Anne. Do you know what has happened now? A group of girls came into her shop, and like all the other girls in the world, they were "dying for some pretty new dresses to wear, but were nearly broke. And, please, weren't there any of those New York models which could be marked down to $15.75?"

And she did it. Yes, she actually selected a large number of her loveliest things and reduced them to $15.75, in spite of the Christmas holidays, all the gay afternoon parties, for which every girl has to have a new dress anyway.

There are tan crepes piped with delicate green, or flame, green crepes piped with tan, two piece models with pleated skirts, and the most modern of smart touches. For instance, one or two have a soft brown calf skin flower on the shoulder, and a slender little calf skin belt. I saw a bright tangerine combined with black, and the tiniest knife pleating in the skirt. Beautiful dresses designed for the modern girl in all her splendid freedom and charm.

But the matron isn't neglected. There are six or more dresses of exceptional quality and line which have been marked to $25, just half their former price. And they are worth it. You couldn't find such handsome dresses for the older (and larger) woman anywhere else for that.

Miss Wiggin's shop is as you know on the 5th Floor of the Lawrence Bldg. and that is on 149 Tremont st.

Oh, Anne,

Silver's are going to move. After this month you won't find them at room 509 in the Blake Building any more. However, you will find them on the same floor, right in front of the elevator. And it's a move for the best, as it brings about a perfectly glorious removal sale, with a general "below-cost" reduction on almost everything in the shop.

They want to clear out all the dresses and coats, the low priced, medium and high priced models. Those beautiful coats are being marked less than their actual cost. Gracklehead blues, deep browns, taupe and the mulberry shades, with their big fur collars and fine linings. More than $20 has been cut from their former prices, until now for $39, $49, and $59 you can get about the finest quality coats in Boston.

It's the same with the dresses. And, Oh!—by the way, here's an especially important bit of news for the larger woman. They have a dozen charming dinner gowns in sizes 48½ for $24.50. It's one of those rare occasions when the pleasingly plump matron can get a beautiful model without its costing a year's salary. And these dresses were $49.50 until today.

Then there are silks, satins, crepes, brocaded crepes, new Spring models and warm Winter woolens. In fact, it's a wonderful opportunity for anyone, little or big, who wants something especially nice in a coat or becoming dress. And the Blake Building, you remember, is 59 Temple Place.

At The Temple Shops, 11 Avon St.

I found the little Dresden China lamp that Barbara commissioned me to get her—and such a charming one it was! How I did enjoy doing that errand, for there was such an assortment of them; dainty ladies dressed like gentlewomen of long ago; pierrots and pierrettes; darling little children. And these cost only from $2.00 to $5.00!

But my shopping didn't end there. Not with that whole street floor teeming with just the sort of things one longs to have! Those lovely old-fashioned fan vases, in amber glass, jade, rose, and the irridescent colors. Or telephone screens in velvet, silk, hand-painted metal, or parchment.

Then we might as well have a hearth brush, since it is durable and attractive, and yet costs only $1.50. And if you can ignore the pottery vases, candle-sticks, plaques, pitchers and bowls from many lands, you are stronger minded than your Priscilla.

Please remember that one of those powder boxes with the pert, old-fashioned maiden for a cover will make my dresser a joy forever. And a set of glass salad plates is a gift not to be overlooked, when you can get such beauties from 79 cents to $4.00 for a set of six. And the smokers' things, book-ends, ship models, and innumerable conveniences for the table and home—well, if you must hurry me out now, please plan to return after lunch.

Weren't You Glad

Monday that you went to the Norfolk Hosiery Company down there in the arcade of the Little Building, last week and bought those silk and wool stockings? I think everybody else did the same, too, for they sold piles of them. And they ought to. Any shop which sells beautiful silk and wool hosiery for $1.50 a pair, in the newest shades, deserves to be popular.

It's a mighty popular little shop anyway. Their all wool stockings for 95c are going like hot cakes. And the Christmas boxes of three pair of silk and wool men's socks in the new English designs, at three pair for $2.75 (1 pair for $1), are a big item. Lucky for us the supply is a big one.

Then there are silk stockings as low as $1.23 that are a splendid bargain, full-fashioned, reinforced lisle feet and top, with an extra long leg. And oh, I discovered something else for you, too. Rayon vests, beautiful long full vests, in peach, orchid and flesh for 69c. A closing out price, of course, but they're beautiful quality for all that.

But It Takes

More than hosiery and dresses to give a woman charm. It takes a glossy, healthy head of hair, the kind of hair we have when L. Max takes a hand, and puts it into proper condition; with every inch of scalp clean and wholesome, and every strand arranged to bring out the best in your features.

Sometimes it's a bob one needs, a permanent wave, the soft, natural kind, or it may be that a few treatments to bring back the life and vitality is all that is necessary for you.

I'd ask L. Max about it, if I were you. Telephone Beach 2691, and make a definite appointment. Then go down to his beautiful shop, at 154 Boylston Street, and consult him personally. But do plan to have a permanent wave by his famous Fredericks method, if he approves of it for you, for there's nothing in the world quite so satisfactory.

Faithfully yours,

Priscilla

BANISH BLUE CHRISTMAS FROM POOR HOMES

You have heard of a "White Christmas" and look forward with interest to having one each year. But did you ever hear of a "blue Christmas?" Probably not, and yet many New England families will have that kind this year, even though the ground is covered with snow.

A Dorchester mother, who has five children and a sick husband, tells of anticipating a "blue Christmas" this year unless some Christmas Goodfellow steps into the picture and gives her a helping hand. Here is what she wrote:

Mora

Gomley

"Can you help a poor woman out that has five children? My husband is home sick with grip and I am afraid he will not be able to go to work for some time, and I am very much afraid we will have a very blue Christmas, unless you can help us out. Please give some Goodfellow my name that wishes to help out.

"The children range from 15 years down to one year old, and I just buried a little baby, and I have had a pretty hard time to get along as I still owe some of her funeral expenses. Dear Editor, if you can do something for me I will be very grateful to you and God bless you."

Can you imagine a man deserting his wife and six children? What kind of a Christmas do you think they will have with the bread winner gone? If you would like to help a family in such a predicament, read the following letter from a woman living on West 3rd street, South Boston, whose name and full address will be given to any Christmas Goodfellow desiring to assist them in their distress:

"I am writing to ask you if you can help me at Xmas, as I am a poor woman with six children, none of them working. My husband left us before my last baby was born, and I haven't heard from him since.

"The overseer of the poor helps me, but that hardly pays my rent and buys food for my children. They have hardly any clothes to keep them warm going to school, and my heart aches for them. The oldest boy is 16 and not working. I hope you will give me some help. I will be glad to get anything. My children need underwear and none of them has a warm coat."

PLAYERS VOLUNTEER.

Through the courtesy of the management, several principals of the marvelously tuneful musical play, "Song of the Flame," now at the Shubert Theatre, will participate in the Sunday night concert and vaudeville show at the same playhouse, next Sunday, for the benefit of the American's Christmas Goodfellow Fund.

Among other artists will be Carolyn Harris Gomley, concert contralto, and Mora. Aiding in the concert are Edward R. Bodfish and John J. Martin of the American Legion.

Among the principals of this delightful musical play who have promised to appear at next Sunday evening's benefit performance are Guy Robertson, whose golden tones thrills audiences nightly at the Shubert; Betty Byron, the charming ingenue of the production; Phebe Brune of "Rose Marie" fame whose dances are high-lights of the show, and Leonard St. Leo who has a host of Boston friends. Some of the music hits of "Song of the Flame" will be presented.

Tickets are meeting with ready sale for next Sunday evening's benefit performance in the Shubert, although choice seats may still be had at the box office of the theatre and from members of Greater Boston posts of the American Legion and their auxiliaries, whose members are endeavoring to make the show a financial success.

According to Bert A. Spears, who will personally supervise Sunday evening's show, one of the best bills ever presented in Boston at a Sunday performance will be offered to the public, despite the low price of tickets, which range from 50 cents in the second balcony to $1.50 in the orchestra, and a few box seats may be had at $2.

Joseph Russo, proprietor of Russo's Beauty Salons at No. 110 Tremont street, 1437 Beacon street, Brookline, and 23 Central square, Lynn, has been elected a Christmas Goodfellow because of the generous offers he has made which will result in many families being cared for at Christmas.

A GENEROUS OFFER.

Mr. Russo will contribute ten per cent. of the entire proceeds of his business in these three up-to-the-minute shops for the week beginning December 13. He has also offered as first prize for women, at the bridge and whist party to be conducted in the crystal ballroom of Hotel Kenmore next Monday evening by Claudia Campbell of Allston, a permanent wave, face massage, manicure, shampoo, etc., totaling $40 in value.

J. J. Martin

E. R. Bodfish

Marion Hennessy of Roslindale expects a big crowd at her Dance Revue tonight in Washington-Irving School, Poplar street, Roslindale. Scores of the most talented children in the Roslindale district will participate in the revue, where many new dances will be introduced, including dances of Fairyland, ballets and specialty numbers and the "Blackbottom." Tickets may be obtained from Miss Hennessy at No. 41 Poplar street, or from her many pupils.

Among those who have recently contributed to the Christmas Goodfellow Fund of the Boston Evening American, to help feed hungry kiddies are: Robert Quinn, $25; "A Friend," $10; Ferdinand C. Speth, $2; H. T. Duffell, $2; Betty and Jackie Falvey of Quincy, $3; Shawmut Lodge, A. F. and A. M., $10; C. S. D., $5; In memory of my sister Amy, B. L. K., $5; G. D. Baker, $1; Mrs. Smith, $2; In memory of Charles P. McMullin of South Boston, $1; John Collett, 50 cents; Danvers, $1; Harry Riordan, Walpole, $1; Gabriel Giarla, $10; Mrs. C. H. Colgate, $2; The Mumford family, Watertown, $5, and John McCarthy, Turner Falls, $1.

POWER PLAYS BIG PART IN ITALY'S PLANS

Electric power's part in the Italian government's land reclamation projects is interestingly illustrated in advices received by the International Power Securities Corporation in reference to the recent inauguration by Mussolini of service on the railroad just completed between Reggio and the River Po. This railroad traverses a territory containing 320 square miles of marshes which have already been reclaimed through government drainage projects.

The land is in the territory served with electricity by the group of companies of which the nucleus is the Edison General Electric Company of Milan, Italy's largest electric utility in which American capital has invested in recent years through the International Power Securities Corporation.

Commenting on the success of these efforts to turn waste areas into productive farming land, the report points out that the value of this previously waste land is about three times the amount spent for its reclamation. These marshes lie in the low land along the valley of the Po.

Some of the water is drained by gravity through canals but as much of the water level is below the river two pumping stations, among the largest of their kind in the world, are required. At one of these, which is located at San Siro, there are eight electrically driven centrifugal pumps each capable of raising 280 cubic feet of water per second against a head of 13 feet. The power consumption of this one station requires a connected load of 6,000 horsepower. The special feature of such demand is the constancy of its use, developing a load which is very desirable for the system furnishing the power.

In the past 75 years about one half of the 7,700 square miles of swamp land in Italy has been reclaimed and 2,300 square miles are at present being reclaimed.

LABOR DISPUTES DROP IN U. S.

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—There is real hope for a reduction in the number of labor controversies in American industry because the habit of mediating disputes is growing stronger, Secretary Davis of the Labor Department said today in his annual report.

So long as enterprising men and women engaged in industry bend their energies toward advancement there will be differences of opinion, he said, but with the principles of conciliation being more generally accepted year by year the nation is bound to see a great reduction in the number of disputes reaching a stage where stoppage of production occurs.

The administration of the immigration laws, vested in the Labor Department, during the past year was "the most satisfactory since the adoption by Congress in 1921 of a limitation policy," Mr. Davis declared.

MILLS OPPOSE TAX RAISES

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 8.—Textile enterprises in North Carolina have issued warning that they will not stand a further imposition of local taxes, since post-war prosperity enjoyed by textile mills until 1920 has entirely disappeared.

This "warning" was embraced in report of committee on taxation at Fall meeting of North Carolina Cotton Manufacturers' Association, made on approach of the 1927 session of the North Carolina Legislature, as 1927 is the year for revaluation of property for taxing purposes.

"It is the recollection of your chairman," the report says, "that in revaluation of 1920 the assessment of cotton mill properties was about quadrupled, assessment on other class of property being merely doubled.

The report further declared the appraisal value of the cotton mills was much lower than in 1920 and gross revenue had greatly decreased since that time.

SIMPLE RITES WILL MARK SEN. M'KINLEY'S FUNERAL

Martinsville, Ind., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Friends and relatives prepared today to take the body of U. S. Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois to his home in Champaign, where funeral services will be conducted Friday. The Senator died here after a four-months' battle against prostatic cancer, the end of which was averted several times only by the rigor of his constitution. The funeral, in keeping with the wishes of the Senator, will be free from ostentation.

EIGHT OPEN CONTEST OF $14,000,000 WILL

Louisville, Dec. 7 (A.P.)—With service today on Kentucky beneficiaries of the will of the late Richard V. Dey, "Forty Niner," and prospector with John W. Mackey and United States Senator James Fair, as defendants, a contest of Dey's will filed in San Francisco November 5, became known. The estate was valued at $14,000,000.

The suit was filed in behalf of eight first cousins of Mrs. Dey, who were cut off in the will with bequests of from $5 to $5,000.

GARNER'S BILL FOR TAX CUT

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—The taxation issue in Congress was definitely drawn today with disclosure of details of the Democratic plan for a permanent $335,000,000 reduction.

Approved by Democratic leaders in both Senate and House, the bill runs counter to Republican opinion and the specific pronouncement by President Coolidge in his annual message against permanent revision of the tax law at present.

Although its general objective has been known for sometime, details of the bill have not been disclosed pending arrangements for its introduction in the House today.

Its major provisions call for reduction of the corporation tax from 13½ per cent. to 11 per cent. and repeal of the automobile, amusement, club dues and produce taxes. Such reduction and repeal of revenue rates are estimated as follows:

Reduction of the corporation tax, $230,000,000 repeal of the automobile tax, $75,000,000; repeal of admissions and club dues taxes, $25,000,000, and repeal of the stamp tax on sales of produce on exchanges, $5,000,000.

The bill was drafted by Representative Garner of Texas, financial spokesman for the minority in the House, after consultation with Senator Simmons of North Carolina, who holds a corresponding position among Democrats in the Senate. Titular leaders of the party, in both Houses also were consulted.

RELICS OF ST. THERESE BROUGHT TO AMERICA

Englewood, N. J., Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Intimate relics of Saint Therese, a Carmelite nun of France who recently was canonized, have arrived in this country wher they are to be enshrined.

The Rev. Albert H. Dolan, of Chicago, national director of the society of Little Flower, who arrived yesterday from France, gathered the relics in Normandy. They will be placed in shrines in Chicago, here, and in Pittsburgh. Among the collection is the chair used by the nun in her cell and the pictures from the wall.

Tells a Good Story About Headaches

Glendale, N. Y. Mrs. J. Schwind writes:—"My head was dizzy at frequent intervals. My stomach was upset and I was horribly constipated. I took Carter's Little Liver Pills and I soon noticed a decided improvement. It is months now since I have had a headache or sick stomach. Your pills have merit."
Carter's Little Liver Pills, a purely vegetable laxative, relieve the constipated condition. They cleanse the intestines of their poisonous matter. They are sugar coated, small, and easy to take. Druggists, 25 & 75c red packages.

DOROTHY LAWRENCE

MRS. NATHANIEL F. EMMONS IN DRAWING ROOM OF HINGHAM HOME

Mrs Emmons plays hostess to [illegible] Miss Lawrence and other [illegible] girls at her handsome home in Hingham on Saturday night next. The entertainment is to be of the quiet, informal sort, so appreciated by members of Boston's haute monde.

COMMENT ON SOCIETY

FOR THE FRIVOLOUSLY INCLINED OF THE FASHIONABLE World, December's first two weeks present an alluring picture. Coming out dances for maidens of high degree follow one another with bewildering rapidity and with a concentrated brilliance seldom surpassed in a Winter's span. The S. Huntington Wolcott ball for Miss Edith Wolcott started the ball a-rolling. This evening Miss Joan Higginson, daughter of Francis Lee Higginson, is formally introduced to her family's important [illegible] and on Friday the Charles Fanning Ayer function lights up the firmament like an aurora.

THE HIGGINSON BALL, at the Somerset, has two very important [illegible] Mr. Higginson is host to a company of [illegible] avenue town house, and Mrs. Frederic [illegible] on the paternal side, entertains at a dinner for [illegible] for the debutante and her set. Formerly amazed dowagers [illegible] appear at these [illegible] to-morrow [illegible] the Higginson ball and sat for a time in the Somerset [illegible]

MR. AND MRS. AYER'S ball at the Hotel Copley-Plaza for Miss Anne Ayer, sumptuously arranged and carried out in lavish beauty, brings to town a bevy of pretty girls from Gotham and elsewhere. The Ayer [illegible] is filled with them. [illegible] Miss Ayer to [illegible] Miss Edith and Miss Anne Colby, daughters of the Everett [illegible] New York, are Ayer house guests.

MISS MARISH WICKES, daughter of Mrs. Forsythe Wickes, who [illegible] in the New York Tuxedo-Newport set, comes to town for the Ayer ball. Also Miss Deborah Brock of Philadelphia, daughter of the John Penn Brocks, who occupy seats with the mighty in Quaker [illegible]dom. Miss Edith and Miss Elizabeth Woodward, nieces of Mrs. F[illegible] are two more who flit in and out of the picture [illegible] Altogether it's a highly presentable [illegible] the Boston girls on their mettle.

OTHER INTERESTING DETAILS there are aplenty. Frederick Ayer and Bayard Tuckerman are chief ushers, and Mr. and Mrs. Ayer are entertaining a very large company at dinner before the dance, at 315 Dartmouth street. It is primarily for debutantes and ushers, but there'll be a sprinkling of the Married Sets, friends of the elder Ayers, and it will be very brilliant.

ANOTHER SMART YOUNG GIRL from the high Gotham circle due for the Ayer dance is Miss Lily Cushing, the stunning debutante daughter of Mrs. James Dennison Sawyer, formerly Mrs. Howard Cushing [illegible] Miss Cushing is a beautiful creature, and matches a Gotham [illegible] with one equally imposing in [illegible]

MISS GRACE McGANN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann of Lake Forest, Ill., is still another out-of-town girl come to take a fling at debutante festivities. She will be with her kinswoman, Mrs. Hendricks Hallett Whitman (Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor) during the week. Mrs. Whitman entertained for Miss McGann last Sunday, and last evening she was a guest at the dinner-dance Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield gave at the Chilton Club for Miss Emily Davis.

MISS McGANN WILL BE at the Ayer ball and then she takes her way Chicagoward again for her own presentation at a large ball her parents are giving for her at the Hotel Blackstone on the evening of December 23. Social supremacy is a family prerogative of this charming girl, and what with beauty and an authoritative place in the social sun, society scribes in the Windy City concede her to be a youthful leader.

SOFT PINK and sky blue moire, combined with the artistry of the Rue de la Paix, was the gown Miss Emily Davis chose for her dinner-dance at the exclusive Chilton Club. Miss Davis is prominently to the fore in local bud ranks. She made her formal bow under the wing of Benjamin F. Crowninshield, her uncle, and now Mrs. Francis Crowninshield, wife of the artist, takes up the golden thread of bud entertainment.

MRS. NATHANIEL F. EMMONS' party on Saturday for four girls promises to be a typical Emmons affair. She possesses a marvelous chef and a flair for informal entertaining, a combination to conjure with and one that delights the Young Set. Her foursome on Saturday numbers Miss Edith Wolcott, Miss Dorothy Lawrence, Miss Eleanor Garfield and Miss Marie Louise Gray.

The Love Wrecker
A Thrilling Romance of Modern Youth in Boston

READ THIS FIRST

HONEY LOU HUNTLEY is private secretary to old "GRUMPY" WALLACK, head of the Wallack factory in Roxbury.

Everybody at the factory likes Honey Lou, from the office vamp, ANN LUDLOW, to JOE MEADOWS, the shipping clerk. But Honey Lou is afraid of Joe Meadows.

JACK WALLACK, son and heir of old "Grumpy," starts to work at the factory. He falls in love with Honey Lou, and she does with him. But when he tries to kiss her, she flies into a rage and slaps his face. Later he apologizes.

One night, when Honey Lou and Jack are leaving the office, they meet ANGELA ALLEN, Jack's childhood friend. Honey Lou is sure that Angela is in love with Jack.

Angela invites Honey Lou to dinner at her home on the night of Jack's birthday.

Jack meets Honey Lou's gentle well-bred mother and her halfsister, MARGRET MOODY, and realizes that she has been reared as carefully as any of the girls of his own world.

MRS. HUNTLEY, Honey Lou's mother, makes a quaint, gauzy dress for her to wear to the party. Honey Lou sees Angela in a plain dress and realizes she is overdressed and queer looking.

Angela persuades her to take two cocktails, telling her that they are fruit juice. Honey Lou drinks them and, overcome by the liquor and the heat and the excitement, faints dead away. And so she does not hear the saintly Angela tell Jack Wallack that she took seven or eight drinks, calling her "hard-boiled."

Honey Lou does not understand why Jack does not come near her for days after Angela's party. She wonders if it is because she drank, or because she let him kiss her on the way home.

SMUGGLE GEMS BY MILLIONS

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.)—Jewels valued at more than $25,000,000 were smuggled into the United States [illegible] alone last year and [illegible] contraband of narcotics has [illegible] enough to cause the government to consider steps for curbing [illegible] drug trade at its source.

This situation was revealed today with [illegible] of testimony before the House Appropriation Committee [illegible] considering the Treasury-Postoffice bill.

Ernest W. [illegible], director of customs, told the committee smuggling had developed on a gigantic scale.

L. G. Nutt, chief of the narcotics division, informed the committee that he had recommended to the Treasury and State Departments that American agents be sent abroad to discover the source of opium and morphine which enters the United States illegally.

PONTIFICATES AT SOLEMN HIGH MASS

Deluged with telegrams and other messages of congratulation, William Cardinal O'Connell today observed his sixty-seventh birthday.

Cardinal O'Connell, in observing his natal day, followed a custom of many years' standing by pontificating at a solemn high mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

Throughout the diocese special prayers were offered for the health of the cardinal on his birthday and to all those who prayed for him the cardinal offered his blessing.

The congratulations showered upon the distinguished prelate came from men and women in all walks of life, many of the warmest expressions coming from non-Catholics.

SPOKE ON MEXICO.

At the impressive service at the Cathedral the Cardinal took occasion to speak in behalf of the oppressed Catholics of Mexico, requesting the offering of communion and prayers for the unfortunate Mexicans.

The Cardinal, apparently in the best of health, arose as usual today and first celebrated mass in his private chapel, as is his custom. His Eminence then proceeded to the Cathedral, which was filled to overflowing, where solemn high mass was celebrated.

Speaking from in front of the tabernacle His Eminence said:

"I [illegible] you a [illegible] for good prayers for your holy communion masses, novenas and [illegible] in preparation for this wonderful and beautiful feast of our Blessed Lady.

"May God bless all those who have asked the intercession of His Blessed Mother for His aid for the poor Catholics of Mexico. We can hardly realize the suffering they are undergoing at the present time for the faith. That is the only thing they are guilty of.

"They are suffering unheard of persecutions. So, let us thank God for the conditions we are living under so happily, and let us pray God that soon our brethren in Mexico will be liberated from this indescribable tyranny.

ASKED BLESSING.

"May God bless all those, too, who have been so kind in offering their prayers for me on this my birthday. God has been so good to us all. We are constantly reminded of the great gifts of God and we must do all we can in return. May God bless and protect us all and keep us in His divine grace."

The Cardinal then gave his blessing.

At the mass he was assisted by the Rev. George P. O'Connor as assistant priest; Rev. Neil A. Cronin, pastor of the Cathedral, deacon; Rev. William A. Dacey, sub-deacon; Rev. Richard J. Quinlan and Rev. Robert P. Barry, deacons of honor; Rev. Harry M. O'Connor and Rev. John J. Wall, masters of ceremonies. The sanctuary choir was under the direction of Rev. William B. Foley.

Following the mass the Cardinal proceeded to the archdiocesan office on Granby street, where he is devoting the day as usual to diocesan affairs. Later he will address the League of Catholic Women.

"I'm going to run away. I [illegible] to go to school," read a note [illegible] 17-year-old Teresa Egan of [illegible] street, Dorchester, who is now being sought by police after her mother's frantic appeal.

BLAMES MISSIONARIES FOR CHINA'S ANTI-BRITISH WAR

London, Dec. 8 (A.P.)—Belief that Great Britain had in a large measure brought about the present anti-British sentiment in China by sending missionaries there to convert the people to Christianity was voiced today by Lord Inchcape, [illegible] magnate, at the annual meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.

"Christian missionary efforts among uncivilized peoples holding beliefs which find expression in fetish worship and inhuman cruelty may be, and doubtless are, fully justified," he added, "but an attempt to break down China's faith, which is as sacred to the Chinese as Christianity is to ourselves, is, I think, to be deplored. Such efforts do far more harm than good."

SAYS CARLOTTA WAS CRABTREE DAUGHTER

A deposition which called her the child of Anna and Jack Crabtree was read in [illegible] court today, where Mrs. Carlotta Cockburn of Arizona is fighting for a share in the estate of the actress, Lotta Crabtree.

The deposition was that of Mrs. Sadie M. Perry of Tucson, Ariz. In is she said the little girl that Ed Bullock adopted was Jack and Anna Crabtree's child. James H. Hoy, counsel for Mrs. Cockburn, read the testimony.

"My husband told me he knew she was Lotta Crabtree's [illegible] and that [illegible] [illegible] money for her [illegible]."

Under cross-examination Mrs. Perry explained that [illegible] Carlotta Crabtree [illegible] had heard a rumor [illegible] had been married before [illegible] to Hannibal [illegible] little girl."

She [illegible] the witness [illegible] and it was [illegible] to Hannibal to see Jack's daughter.

Retta T. Goodson, St. Louis, Mo., to whose [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] was a [illegible] one of Ed Bullock's [illegible] came to him that Carlotta Crabtree was for some reason an orphan deserted by her father first and her mother [illegible].

He denied any affection between the child and Ed Bullock.

"Mrs. McVay, Ed's sister, was a Southern woman of very fine [illegible] never would have [illegible] Lotta Crabtree into her [illegible] there been any question as to that chance. When an [illegible] bachelor befriends a little girl, small-town gossips and old women start their tongues awagging, I suppose."

CRITICISES TOWN OFFICIAL FOR HIGH LOAN RATES

A criticism of Town Treasurer George A. Barry of Milford is contained in a report to the board of selectmen after an examination of the books of the treasurer made under the direction of Theodore N. Waddell, State Director of Accounts. Waddell discloses that the town has been paying 5 per cent interest on all loans issued for notes in anticipation of taxes for a number of years, a rate "from 1 to 1¼ per cent. higher than the prevailing rates for loans of this kind." As a result of this practice, the State director points out, Milford has been paying $1,800 to $2,500 annually more than it should.

TELLS STORY OF 3 WOMEN IN WILSON'S LIFE

New York, Dec. 8 (I.N.S.)—The three women in the life of the late President Woodrow Wilson are [illegible] graphically described in "Secrets of the White House" by Elizabeth Jaffray, [illegible] housekeeper of the executive mansion for 18 years, in the second of her series which appeared today in the January number of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Beside the first and second Mrs. Wilson there was a "Mrs. Hulbert—better known as Mrs. Peck" who became "a trusted and close friend" to President Wilson.

"It is difficult to give an exact picture of the first Mrs. Wilson," Mrs. [illegible] writes. [illegible]

LONG INTIMATE.

[illegible] known as Mrs. [illegible] was an intimate of [illegible] Mrs. Wilson [illegible] interested [illegible] of helping [illegible].

"The friendship grew until Mrs. Hulbert became a trusted and close friend.

"During the first two and a half years Mr. Wilson was at the White House—the years covering [illegible] of the death of the first Mrs. Wilson—the President [illegible] morning and [illegible] made three visits to [illegible] death of the first Mrs. Wilson.

"During the [illegible] Wilson [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] was a White House guest at [illegible] time for [illegible]. At that time the President's own family were not particularly fond of her, but this did not keep her from being a guest at the White House.

Mrs. Jaffrey terms President Wilson's romance with Mrs. Galt, who was to be the second Mrs. Wilson, as "a lovely old-fashioned courtship."

"After dinner the President and Mrs. Galt would walk under the trees in the moonlight hand in hand, like boy and girl sweethearts," Mrs. Jaffray records.

The President's daughters were delighted with the match.

Mrs. Jeffray draws a picture of President Wilson as "more or less impractical," generous yet able to accumulate a "nestegg" from his salary as chief executive.

In a way President Wilson, like Mrs. Wilson (the first), was visionary and more or less impractical. He was little interested in many of the everyday material things that fill a good part of men's lives.

MINOR IMPORTANCE.

"Food and clothes were of minor importance to him. He had no extravagances at all—except the extravagance of buying beautiful and [illegible] books.

"Of all the men who were in the White House during the years I was there, I think President Wilson was [illegible] began.

"But from his salary during the eight years that he was President he was able to save enough money to buy the second Mrs. Wilson a home on S street, where she now resides, and to leave her a fairly comfortable income, as well as a modest annuity to Miss Margaret Wilson, his one unmarried daughter."

COOLIDGE PUTS IN 4-BILLION BUDGET BILL

into effect the expressed will of the people as written into the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and the will of Congress as expressed in the Volstead Act will be done.

[illegible] Coolidge sprung a surprise [illegible] Congress in declaring [illegible] treasury surplus was at [illegible] estimated at $250,000,000, is [illegible] certain to mount to $383,000,000 [illegible] all suggestions to use [illegible] to cut the national debt [illegible] new public buildings, [illegible] Coolidge declared that the [illegible] can make of it [illegible] into the pockets [illegible] American taxpayers" who have paid it into Uncle Sam's treasury.

President Coolidge further threw down the gauntlet to Congress in the tax matter.

[illegible] there must be no [illegible] as a credit to the [illegible] their bills fall due [illegible] June 15 next. He [illegible] to recommend that any portion of it be applied to the auto or nuisance taxes.

The President's budget contained a bright ray of hope for those who confidently assert that a modern air fleet is the best weapon of defense for Uncle Sam.

It brought chagrin for the old army chiefs who have been accused by Colonel Billy Mitchell and other experts of neglecting to recognize the growing importance of air defenses.

Waiting on Ford

[illegible] dent Coolidge commended the [illegible] aviation expansion program [illegible] he asked for an appropriation [illegible] $82,500,000 for the first [illegible] ing of the army and [illegible] forces and for furtherance [illegible] ary Hoover's plans to encourage commercial aviation.

Of the $73,100,000 recommended by the President for army and navy aeronautics, $20,600,000 would be used for the purchase of new planes [illegible] 100,000 for the construction of new barracks and quarters.

[illegible] insisted that the ad[illegible] officers and men necessary [illegible] air forces to the [illegible] by the five-year program [illegible] from the older [illegible] service.

The President recommended that [illegible] construction of the two authorized [illegible] dirigibles, to cost $8,000,000, [illegible] experiments [illegible] metal dirigible now be[illegible] Henry Ford prove or [illegible] prove the efficiency of lighter-[illegible] The government, he said, is now contributing $300,000 to the success of the Ford venture.

Nearly $10,000,000 was allowed in the budget for the construction of planes and hangers, landing fields, night flying beacons and for charting under Secretary Hoover, in support of his aviation program, the President said.

President Coolidge's budget estimates for the Army and Navy next [illegible] total $680,537,642 or $4,200,000 [illegible] re than was allowed for the year [illegible] running.

It provides for the Army 11,961 commissioned officers, 1,153 cadets, 1,219 warrant officers and 115,000 enlisted men.

For the Navy, it provides 7,231 [illegible] ned officers, 1,479 warrant officers, 1,545 midshipmen and 82,000 enlisted men. The Marine Corps was given 1,020 commissioned officers, 155 warrant officers and 6,800 enlisted men.

With the reserve forces and other complements available for war, the budget provides for military and naval strength of 610,000 men. This force is enough to meet the needs of the day, the President said.

He added the following explanation of his refusal to increase the regular army and navy:

"This is a very considerable sum to spend for protection in time of peace. No threatening cloud at the present time darkens the sky. Our intent and attitude is one of friendly regard toward all nations and peoples.

"I am in favor of adequate military preparedness, and so far as personnel is concerned we should certainly have this from the funds carried in these estimates."

Curbs Navy Building

The President asked Congress to delay construction of three of the eight light cruisers which were authorized by earlier law. While this act was construed by some as another indication of the President's regard for airships rather than the [illegible] arms of defense, he accounted for it in this statement:

"This country is now engaged in negotiations to broaden our existing treaties with the great powers which deal with the elimination of competition in naval armaments. I feel that it would be unfortunate at this time and not in keeping with our attitude toward these negotiations to commence the construction of these three cruisers."

His budget allows $1,000,000 to begin the dredging of Pearl Harbor, the naval base of Hawaii, which would shelter Uncle Sam's sea forces in the event of any Western engagement.

He recommends $12,000,000 for the shipping board and urged Congress to devise a program to keep the American Merchant Marine on the seas.

He proposes $75,000,000 for good roads next year.

lation, and favors adequate financing of enforcement.

WARNED BY OUR recent coal troubles and by England's industrial strike calamity, the President wants legislation that will put our coal supply beyond the reach of owners' and workers' fights.

THE PRESIDENT wants adequate military and naval preparedness. Everybody knows that an adequate air fleet is included in his program. Pray that the country may have such a fleet in the air, not merely on paper.

THE COUNTRY has more money, at least two hundred and fifty millions more, than it needs. The President wants Congress to spend that, refunding it, which would seem to be the honest thing, to taxpayers from whom it was taken, under the impression that the government would need it or use it to reduce the public debt.

THE PRESIDENT wants Congress to appropriate, at one session, enough money to last two years. This would allow Congressmen to think about legislation instead of about money at least half the time. Congress won't like that. Money is the biggest club that a legislator can swing.

ABOUT PROHIBITION, the President says, "Failure to support the Constitution and obey the law ought not to be tolerated by public opinion." He is right, but it is tolerated.

The public can do anything it chooses with its votes. If it wants a change it ought to vote for it.

THE PRESIDENT doesn't intend to have the United States thrown open to foreign competition with American business men, manufacturers and workers.

He shows that 65 per cent. of our imports come in free of duty, that half of the imports taxed are agricultural products that do not come from Europe.

THIS SETTLES the suggestion that our cruel tariff is keeping Europe from getting on its feet.

Anyhow, President Coolidge, born in Vermont, raised in Massachusetts, and moved to Washington, realizes that he is paid to worry about this country, letting those that draw salaries in Europe worry about that part of the world.

OUTSIDE OF some things that need doing, the President thinks this country is doing pretty well, and it is.

EVERYBODY will be glad to hear that President Coolidge indorses the program for improving rivers, canals and other waterways in the United States.

The so-called Hoover plan is evidently a Coolidge-Hoover program.

A SIX-YEAR-OLD BOY in England, otherwise normal, writes backward and cannot write any other way. This interests and amazes everybody. What ought to amaze us is that there are on earth sixteen hundred millions of human beings, all of whom can be taught to write forward, walk up and down stairs, run an automobile, etc.

The sixteen hundred millions can also be taught to live on the Equator with a temperature of 120 above, and at the North Pole with 60 degrees below zero. This is an adaptable race.

JOSEPH S. DONOVAN knew exactly what he wanted when he went to work in a carpet factory for $1.50 a week. While he was working in the shop he said he would make a million by the time he was forty-five and retire.

Last September, not yet forty-four, he had his million and retired, as he promised. Now he is dead.

THE BEST THING, when you have made your first million, is to go on and make your second. It isn't the money, but the fact that you are working, which enables others to find employment and independence.

The right kind of American begins his rest when the undertaker gets him. That is a long and an early enough rest for anybody.

THERE IS no room on the earth for a parasite, and any man that stops working before he is ninety is that.

$27,340,000 Asked for Prohibition Enforcement

Washington, Dec. 8 (A.P.)—The first of the annual supply bills for the Treasury and Postoffice departments, was reported today to the House by its appropriations committee.

The bill proposed appropriations for the fiscal year beginning next July 1 amounting to $753,483,000 for the postal service and $137,[illegible],000 for the Treasury, including $27,340,000 for prohibition enforcement. Of the latter figure, $11,990,000 was allotted for the prohibition unit and $15,349,000 for anti-liquor smuggling activities of the coast guard.

Soles of Feet Control Golf, Says British Expert

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (A.P.).—Golf is a matter of the soles of your feet in the final analysis of George Duncan, one of Great Britain's leading professionals.

"I've [illegible] golf [illegible]," he said after arriving here yesterday on the [illegible] I've got it all [illegible] legs and [illegible] was last here, but now [illegible] down to the soles of the [illegible]

Duncan will leave New York for the coast Friday returning here and thence to England late in February. He will enter the Sacramento, Cal., open tournament starting December 17. It is Duncan's fifth trip to America.

London Moves to Save Famous Golf Courses

London, Dec. 8 (A.P.)—To save golf courses near London, the American Country Club system, with residential districts constructed around them, is being adopted.

Home builders have encroached upon or crowded out golf links in many suburban districts. Raynes Park, a famous course, has disappeared. Tooting Bec, one of the oldest near London, is menaced, and Crewstoke will close down in the Spring. The opening of new roads from London to the country also has ruined numerous golf layouts.

New developments, some of them are pretentious as the American Country Club districts are springing up near London. Wentworth, St. George's Hill and Moor Park, where Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen and the other American stars played matches last Summer, are examples of the new type of London's golfing suburbs.

300 Entries for Xmas Seal Golf Tournament

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 8 (A.P.) Over 300 entries have been made for the Christmas seal golf tournament opening today at the Seaview Golf Club near here, under the auspices of the National Tuberculosis Association, and at least another 50 contestants were due to enter before the first ball is driven off.

Bobby Jones, although unable to be present, has contributed the prize for the qualifying rounds which will be played off today.

Many of the most prominent men in social, business and sport circles of the East are taking part.

The Seaview course is in excellent condition, there having been no snow to interfere with the play.

B.A.A. Athletes Begin Long Training Grind

By STED CHANDLER

THERE is never any letup of motion in the cycle of sport, so though we may consider ourselves to be "in between seasons," the fact remains that the athletes are still at work. Between now and the official opening of the Winter track season there is much work to be done, and no one [illegible] preparation more wholeheartedly than the Boston Athletic Association track squad.

It is easy enough for college men [illegible] but [illegible] ers, [illegible] whom must work [illegible] and do their lugging whenever they can squeeze [illegible] the dark [illegible] B. A. A. squad [illegible]

The prospects are good. New York boasts a [illegible] Messers, Holden, Connolly and Helfrey, which will take a lot of beating. But among [illegible] who have already begun [illegible] are [illegible] several who are the equals of the Manhattan four.

Louis Welch, Walter Mulvihill, the former Holy Cross star, Lloyd Hahn, one of the foremost middle distance men in the game, and Eric Smith of Brooklyn are among the entries.

They are all well known in these parts and much is expected of them. According to Tom Kanaly, the Unicorn athletic director, Hahn is due in Boston this week and [illegible]

Cowell Takes Issue Against Tie Scores in Grid Games

By BIRNEY P. LYNCH

BILL COWELL, coach of the University of New Hampshire football eleven, which gave the Brown Iron Men one of their hardest games of the [illegible] of tie games. Cowell [illegible] record as an enemy of [illegible] suggested changes in the scoring [illegible] under which it is possible [illegible] with the score even.

"I am [illegible] covering [illegible] five yard [illegible] periods, I think the team [illegible] allowed to [illegible] or they score.

"I am [illegible] system. A year ago I was [illegible] plays per period [illegible] strongly in favor of the [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] by the Eastern [illegible] against [illegible] of the [illegible] changed [illegible]

[illegible] scores [illegible] desirable. [illegible] are [illegible] to [illegible] game, [illegible] be decided [illegible] agrees with [illegible]

In explaining my stand in relation to tie games in football I can only say that from my own experience I have found that there really has been more justice in tie games than there has been injustice. Of course I realize that in some cases one team will far outplay the other and then, through a break in the game the supposedly inferior team will score and a tie game will result.

All things considered, the Army-Navy game of this year ended in a tie score and, I believe practically every one that was there will agree that this was probably the best indication of both teams' strength.

In my own experience I look back to a memorable game that was played in Hanover when Colgate and Dartmouth battled to a tie score, and I can honestly say that if either team had been fortunate enough to win that game by one or two points it would have been absolutely unfair to the other team.

In other words you can see that I am not opposed to tie games. However, I am opposed to the present method of scoring one point after a touchdown which invariably leads to a one point defeat for a team which, in the majority of cases, has demonstrated its ability to score as many times by touchdowns as the supposedly better team.

HAPHEY WILL CAPTAIN LAWRENCE GRID TEAM

Lawrence, Dec. 8—Robert H. Haphey, fullback on the local High School eleven, was elected captain of the 1927 football. The newly elected leader of the gridiron warriors [illegible]

Sharkey Tells How He Will Dethrone Tunney

JACK SHARKEY

Jack Sharkey, sensational Boston heavyweight who has been signed by Tex Rickard to battle Gene Tunney for the world's heavyweight championship in New York on September 15 of next year, has written the story of his remarkable life for the Boston Evening American. The first article will appear in next Monday's Boston Evening American. The story of Sharkey's life reads like a page from a book of fiction. He tells of his boyhood days in Binghamton, N. Y., how he was obliged to leave school at an early age to help support his parents, his desire for a life of adventure which ended with his enlisting in the Navy. Sharkey reveals how he got his start in boxing in Boston and how he battled his way up the pugilistic ladder under Johnny Buckley's management until he crushed Harry Wills, the man whom both Dempsey and Tunney refused to meet. The Boston heavyweight also tells his plans for defeating Tunney.

BOSTON WOULD SUPPORT TITLE BOUTS

NEW ENGLAND'S surge toward the fistic heights, already much more than a threat, may make Boston the pugilistic capitol of the world ere another year rolls around. Two of the leading pretenders for the heavyweight crown—Jack Sharkey and Jimmy Maloney—register from this village. Al Mello of Lowell is the most prominent of the young welterweights. Honeyboy Finnegan and Red Chapman own two-thirds of the featherweight title already, and will probably fight it out eventually. Quite a few years have vanished since ring champs flourished in this section, but the present big crop makes up for the other lean periods. Now that we have the fighters it's about time that the native promoters went to work to give the boys a chance to do their stuff for home consumption. The young men who twist ears and remove teeth with boxing gloves naturally go after the money. They have been getting it in New York. There isn't a real reason why they cannot collect it in Boston. The average big gate at Madison Square Garden, the country's richest indoor glove garage, is $50,000. At least that much could be tempted into the coffers at the new Arena any time a club wanted to put on a championship row. Some 11,000 fans can be parked in the Arena. There's no State limit on ticket prices. The lover of the sock will pay as much here as he will in New York, or anywhere else. And save the train fare. A smart promoter, putting on a Sharkey-Maloney go, or a Finnegan-Bass scrap, could bring at least $60,000 into the St. Botolph street box office. Selling 2,000 tickets at $10, 3,000 at $5 and 6,000 at $3 would accomplish that little thing, as you can figure for yourself.

SHEPPARD HAS CHANCE TO HORN IN

Boston fans would go for the real thing. Hundreds of them paid the top price to watch Tunney lick Dempsey at the Sesquicentennial. Half the ringside seats at the Sharkey-Wills jam in Brooklyn were owned by Boston rooters. Local sport lovers trickle around to world series ball games and big football battles. They laugh at the cost. They would welcome a chance to kick in at home. All fans love to be taken. It's part of sport. The promoter who first gambles with the idea here, indoors or out, will make a bankroll for himself.

CARRIGAN EVIDENTLY BELIEVES THAT A FAST MACHINE CANNOT GET ALONG WITH WEAK BATTERIES

JOHNNY SHEPPARD can make the featherweight title distinctly a Boston affair if he outslams Benny Bass at Mechanics Friday night. Johnny isn't a soft take for anybody and Benny may ramble into a flock of trouble. Young Mister Bass is one of the logical contenders. He has been matched with Red Chapman. The winner will be stacked up against Honeyboy Finnegan, somewhere in the future.

If Johnny removes the Bass party, he will be eligible for a section of a fine three-cornered brawl. The Woburn youth has been swinging mittens for a long time. He realizes that his greatest opportunity is right in front. He'll be in there with all he has, and he has more than a little.

COUNTRYWIDE COMMENT INCLINES US TO THINK THAT MR. VOLSTEAD SHOULD BE ON THE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE.

CARRIGAN STARTS OFF ON RIGHT FOOT

BILL CARRIGAN'S first move as Red Sox manager made a great hit in Boston. William is getting rid of the dead wood, as everybody hoped he would. He may not get anything much in return, but Boston fans are happy to see that he's trying. The effort is something, even if it doesn't accomplish much.

Too many near big leaguers have been cluttering the Sox roster for a number of years. A gang of kids, with promise and ambition, could not fall more dismally than have the Fenway teams of the past few years. The youngsters always have a chance of getting somewhere.

LUCKY STRIKE "IT'S TOASTED" CIGARETTES

Yes, Different

Cigarettes are cigarettes, many people think, until they get acquainted with Lucky Strikes. Then they appreciate the difference.

That's because Lucky Strike tobaccos—the world's finest Turkish and domestic—are subjected to a costly extra process, toasting. If judged on for their tobaccos, Lucky Strikes would rank as the finest.

But the added refinement of toasting gives them an individuality all their own. Lucky Strike smokers enjoy:

1. Finer Flavor. Toasting for 45 minutes develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos.
2. Smoothness. Toasting for 45 minutes removes all "bite" and harshness, hence never any throat irritation.
3. Freshness. Then the tobacco is suddenly chilled. This seals the flavor in and insures constant freshness.

Thus the toasting process is an addition. It adds a unique and distinct improvement to a cigarette that has already been made from the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. It is the reason millions prefer Lucky Strikes.

Zizi Loved the Prince's Promise to Make Her Queen

ZIZI LAMBRINO, wife of PRINCE CAROL, son of QUEEN MARIE OF RUMANIA, tells of her first secret meeting with the PRINCE in today's extract from her love novel. ROSA, in this intimate relation, is really ZIZI.

By ZIZI LAMBRINO.

[illegible] 1926, by the World-Wide News Service, Inc., Boston, Mass. Quotation in whole or in part prohibited, translation rights reserved in all countries.

"Early next morning the news is spread that two hundred wounded soldiers have been returned to the village. The town-hall, the church, and the theatre, have been turned into hospitals.

"Three youthful soldiers were brought to Rosa to be taken care of, one of whom died an hour after he reached the house.

"Rosa had received a short training in nursing the wounded, and she is putting clean bandages on the wounds of the other two, both of whom are lingering between life and death when the Prince and his [illegible] arrive, demanding an audience.

"She protests that these men are [illegible] smiles. What of the two common soldiers. Even if they lived they would never be able to go to the front again.

"[illegible] would be invalids, a further [illegible] on the resources of the country. Better for them, better for the [illegible] [illegible] and, if they didn't live. The Prince wishes attention, the Prince [illegible] attention. It is the Prince's [illegible] that Rosa entertain him."

[illegible] next chapter takes [illegible] a [illegible] appointed by the aide of the Prince where Rosa in a private [illegible] the Prince. The Prince pours out his heart in a language [illegible] fantastic, exhilarating and [illegible] Rosa has never before [illegible] the language of love, so fluent [illegible] radiant.

"Rosa knew only one kind of love. [illegible] she remembered her father [illegible] for her mother, an undying [illegible] that had not died even with the death of one of the participants. [illegible] Rosa had no mother.

[illegible] the Prince expostulated, begged, threatened, argued, reasoned and [illegible] Rosa became captivated and in her [illegible] resounded a stir that grew into [illegible] and [illegible]

"From that day on the Prince and Rosa met daily and in secrecy. Rosa became enamored with the Prince. She believed that if the Crown or throne interfered with that happiness that was everlasting, the Prince would sacrifice it all for her.

"Not only has Rosa become convinced but the Prince has even hypnotized old Martha. She, too, is now in [illegible] the Prince's influence. Rosa's father has become 'invalided' and recalled from the front.

"He is given an honored position in the village and is engaged in war work, 'behind the lines at the home front.' Rosa's father [illegible] the great honor, and in his [illegible] and [illegible] many [illegible] are being [illegible] Rosa [illegible] the Prince [illegible]

"He has told her that the throne is not secure, that the Emperor [illegible] in constant fear of civil war. The Queen is popular among the middle classes, but very much disliked among the peasants.

"As to Rosa's father,—he was an old soldier, not lacking education, and endowed with ambition. He did [illegible] to be told the consequence of such a marriage.

"He already saw himself a great power and influence, the Queen's father, perhaps a Prime Minister and if not, surely the unofficial Prime Minister of Rumania.

"Martha, too, began to see visions [illegible] But [illegible] innate, subconscious, [illegible] in a [illegible] to be served, [illegible] whenever the opportunity offered.

"Old Martha [illegible] opened the doors, as she had seen in village pageants or [illegible] in fairy tales.

"But the secret [illegible] of a Prince, and [illegible] of a Prince cannot remain a secret for very long. First the Queen, then the Emperor heard of it.

"As [illegible] the Prince's [illegible] the Prince [illegible] removed Rosa, her father and Martha to [illegible] so that Rosa could be near him and he could spend with her the hours he could [illegible] from his duties without [illegible] to the High [illegible] As a consequence [illegible] Prince sends Rosa, her father and Martha to Odessa. This news deceives the Queen and the Emperor, for they think that the Prince is tired of Rosa and that he has sent her away to Russia and that before many weeks he will forget her.

"But one day the General Command [illegible] the Prince [illegible] made and he is nowhere to be found. Finally [illegible] learned that he has followed [illegible] to Odessa, and there married her. [illegible] The Emperor's Court [illegible] Jassy. [illegible]

Baked INDIAN PUDDING A REAL Dessert when made with Grandma's MOLASSES

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"AT the Star?" I asked.

"Yes. I'm reporting back for duty at the old shop," Ralph said. "And I'm mighty eager to get into harness. You'll be back by the next week-end, you think?"

"Surely," I replied, "and I'll be looking forward to seeing you then."

But after we had said goodbye, many questions came to [illegible] [illegible] wondering how [illegible] knew of the way matters stood between Jim and me. [illegible] the [illegible] that I would see Pat or Jeanie before I met him, and then [illegible] would be fully aware of my problem in my sorrow. In a sort of panic I found myself [illegible] to call him back, to arrange to see him at once and to make sure that the account of my affairs came to him through me instead of by way of someone who [illegible] [illegible] the temptation to try to [illegible] in New York and [illegible] to [illegible] Lorraine [illegible] make arrangements for our trip.

"This trip means a respite for me—a chance to get a [illegible]" I admonished myself. "And it may mean even more to Lorraine."

But it did not occur to me that my entire future might hinge on that trip.

On the way out to the gateway to the West, of which Ridgewood is a suburban [illegible] to get my breath after a whirlwind [illegible] four hours of preparation for the trip. Lorraine Thurlow proved herself even more of a [illegible] than it was fair to expect. [illegible] she was [illegible] with the [illegible] of her own [illegible] to see [illegible] Dean [illegible] she kept [illegible] gave me a chance to relax and "invite my soul."

Sensing my need of quiet, Lorraine spent most of her time in the observation car of our luxurious train and let me have our compartment to myself.

My thoughts [illegible] whirling around chaotically, as if they knew this was [illegible] last chance [illegible] to [illegible] on my own [illegible] to deal with my plans in regard to a future without Jim. I thought and puzzled and planned desperately but seemingly to no purpose. However, by the time we arrived at our destination, one thing was clear to me. There is no use in my trying to hold Jim, since he wants to be free to seek the happiness which Arlette [illegible] he missed with me.

But whether I would take Lorena Hughes's advice and put myself to the torture of doing nothing and sitting idly awaiting developments or whether I simply must take some step to handle [illegible] I could not decide. And when at last we arrived at Ridgewood, I was no nearer a decision than when we got on our train at Grand Central.

Wilmer Dean met us at the dingy station where we alighted, and from the moment he appeared on the scene surprises began. Mr. Dean was a fine upstanding chap with the broad shoulders and slender hips of an athlete. He had twinkling eyes behind shell-rimmed glasses, a crisp little mustache and straight black hair faintly streaked with gray.

He appeared to be at least forty rather than the boyish thirty-two for which I had been prepared. And though his whole being vibrated with excitement on seeing Lorraine, he held himself well in leash and was dignity itself until she told him brightly.

"Mrs. Harrison is in my confidence. Wil. You don't have to do any pretending for her benefit."

We were on our way across the street to the spot where his car was parked when Lorraine said this, and for the moment Mr. Dean did not answer. But when he reached the car he swung quickly toward Lorraine, seized her in his arms, kissed her [illegible] and lifted her into the car as if she were [illegible] instead of the stately Mrs. Thurlow, who is one of the fashion leaders of the East. Then he grinned at me boyishly as he said:

"I guess you won't mind riding in the tonneau with a couple of suit cases for company. You see, it is about a thousand years since I've seen my girl—I won't have much chance to hold hands with her later."

Some Fungi Parasites

By CHAS. A. L. REED, M.D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU [illegible] are not aware of [illegible] fact that [illegible] and old [illegible] beings are subject to diseases caused by different fungi.

Many fungi are parasitic, which means that they live upon and at the expense of some other living body. The body on which they live [illegible] the host, and, as such entertains and feeds its fungus guests without having extended an invitation.

Every once in a while you are the host to fungus guests who reward your hospitality by making you ill.

They are similar in many ways to bacteria; for instance, they produce toxins and their invasion can be counteracted from the outside by antiseptics, and from the inside by the use [illegible] antibodies and vaccines.

Fetid breath is sometimes due to fungus, and a treatment better than any popular mouth wash is to have the tonsil crypts cleared of fungus nodules and the throat cleansed with glycerine and borax.

Once the cause is known to be a plant parasite the most persistent symptom often yields to simple remedies. The treatment of bronchial troubles, attributed to tuberculosis, and that of tonsilar throat mistaken for diphtheria, may be much simplified by more recognition of the role played by fungi.

She [illegible] her head. She was ashamed for [illegible] wanted to defend him, but she couldn't. There was nothing she could say. She could only keep silent, hiding her eyes.

"Listen, Rosemary. Did he ever meet the folks? Did Ma [illegible] the boys?"

"Oh, please don't—please don't—" She couldn't tell him, couldn't bear to remember, that [illegible] hadn't wanted Ma to meet him. She [illegible]—not ashamed of Ma—oh, no—not really ashamed of Ma—[illegible] the old house, and Ma's kitchen aprons, and the old slippers she wore.

"Now we're going to [illegible] this out [illegible], honey. I want to get it straight, for all of us. I want you to get it straight, too. It isn't any of my business—but—did he want to marry you—did he ask you that, Rosemary?"

She shook her head, and tried to free herself from Phil's enveloping arms.

"Did he? Tell me, dearest, did he?"

"[illegible] He didn't [illegible] "Do you have to marry everybody you know?"

He smiled at her vehemence. "Same old [illegible] going good! You big baby—gosh, I ought to have dragged you up to Maine with me by the hair when I wanted [illegible] year [illegible]

[illegible] We're going to get [illegible] and your [illegible] the [illegible] darn little burgs you ever saw in your whole life and—say, can't we [illegible] some place for a [illegible] the [illegible] standing out [illegible] in the hall."

She led him into the apartment [illegible]

He walked [illegible] "The [illegible] So that's where you've been living. Kind of dismal if you ask me. I like things more cheerful. Candles and a fire, [illegible] I've lots of [illegible] and [illegible] up to date. Wait [illegible] the place I picked out. [illegible]" He sank [illegible] with him, holding [illegible] kissing her.

"Now—don't you love your old man? Don't I make your big butter and egg man look sick? Love me. Like you used to. What's the matter? Rosemary—for God's sake—don't look that way—like you were [illegible] Ain't I [illegible] Rosemary—don't tell me you [illegible] care any more! After I [illegible] the boss, and I got the house picked out! Love me—please—I—I can't go back without you!"

Her Whole Soul Ached as She Realized She to Had Hurt Him

He hid his face against the chair, turning it from her. Her whole soul ached for him. He loved her she was going to hurt him frightfully, break his happy pride. And when that was broken, when he hadn't that to sustain him he'd slip back into the old way, the old slipshod lazy way. He'd be the old Phil again—the ne'er-do-well—

She couldn't do it. Couldn't send him away that way. And she couldn't tell him she [illegible] him, when she didn't. [illegible] marry him, loving somebody [illegible]

("Oh what shall I do—what shall I do? [illegible] Don't, [illegible] I'll [illegible] heart.")

He lifted his head at [illegible] back [illegible] nervous gesture. "What do you mean?"

"I don't know," she said truthfully. "I don't [illegible] Phil."

"You don't know——"

"No—I'm too upset. I just got out of jail!" She tried to laugh, but the laugh died in her throat. "And that woman died here——"

"The devil she did. Oh, of all the blundering fools I'm the biggest. Of course she did—how did I—and what are you hanging around for——"

"I was just going——"

"Sure you were going. And [illegible] we're going to Gertie's for dinner. Forgot to tell you. I went there for you, and she said to bring you, and tell you to move over there for a while."

"I don't want to go," she said obstinately.

"Why not? You don't want to go to your own sister——"

No. After the way she talked to me—I think it would be better if I didn't——" She tried to go on, but she couldn't. She could only make little [illegible] helpless gestures—and grab for her handkerchief. "I'm always crying," she burst out [illegible] "It's disgusting. You [illegible] to go away and leave me—I'm not worth fooling with——"

"Forget it, will you?" He kissed her quivering mouth, handed her a big [illegible] folded handkerchief out of his coat pocket.

"You're all upset, that's all. I guess you don't hardly know your own mind right now. But you'll be all right in a day or two. Now come on, we're going to move on. Are you all packed? This all your stuff?" He moved around [illegible] at her trunk, the big black hatbox the little over-night bag.

"Yes—I'm all ready," she said watching him, despondently from the chair.

He began to whistle, under his breath, snatches from "Sally"—walking around, pulling the shades, closing doors carefully. "This your hat? Put it on—we're off—we'll take the bags, and I'll send an expressman around later for the trunk."

"But I'm not going to Gertie's!"

"Oh, yes, you are. Of course you are. Come on—pronto!" He was laughing now, half pulling, half carrying her toward the door.

She was too tired to argue. "All right," she said listless.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a certain young man a year. He is twenty three and I am eighteen.

We have been engaged three months. He says that he loves me and I know he is sincere. I'm sure that I love him.

There is just one fault that he finds about me, and I also find the same trouble with him—it is about disagreeing. Now, it seems to me that I agree to everything he says but he takes me up on little petty things. Yet he is considered to have a good disposition.

Of course, we have a little argument once in a while, but that's all it amounts to. Now what would you advise me to do in a case like this, please? Also how can we avoid these arguments?

BETTY

LET him have the "last word," my dear. It is far wiser to agree with him and avoid being opinionated and argumentative. If you can't honestly agree with him, remain silent or change the subject. Nothing is gained and much is lost by quarrelling with the "dearest man." If you refuse to quarrel, there will be no quarrels. Good luck and happiness to you both.

CHAPTER IX.

IT was on the Saturday [illegible] before Christmas that [illegible] Wallack called Honey Lou to [illegible] and [illegible]

He was frowning at her from [illegible] desk [illegible] into his office.

[illegible] and in the [illegible] worked [illegible] come to [illegible] "Grumpy's" [illegible] his good-natured [illegible] had a twinkle in his sharp eyes.

He was holding a little white envelope in his hands, and when Honey Lou came up to his desk he held it out to her.

"Something for you," he said to her in his short gruff [illegible] it along and [illegible] Christmas, [illegible]"

Honey Lou [illegible] envelope [illegible] Then she [illegible]

"I can't take [illegible] money that I don't earn," she [illegible] him slowly and laid the little envelope down on his desk. He threw up his head, glared at her [illegible] brought his fist down on the top of the mahogany desk with a resounding thud.

"And why not? Don't be a fool young woman," he [illegible] enough to [illegible] wife knows [illegible] giving [illegible] money. Now [illegible] it—and don't bother me any more about it."

But Honey Lou did [illegible] money. She shook her [illegible]

"Don't be a fool [illegible]" he retorted, and a gleam that [illegible] the gleam in his own eyes [illegible] hers. "I just can't take money from anybody—from you or [illegible] else."

And she turned on her heel and marched out of the office.

A half minute later, she opened the door again.

Drawn up before the door was a long dark-blue limousine, and [illegible] Lou gave a little [illegible] saw who was sitting within. [illegible] Angela Allen.

She opened the door of the great car and waved a white-gloved [illegible] at Honey Lou. Her soprano voice rippled out on the quiet evening air like the chink of silver coins falling on a sheet of glass.

"How do you do!" she said. "I've been wondering all week whether you got over your—sickness." She laughed and Honey Lou had a childish longing to go over to her and slap her face.

It was a shameful longing, because she knew that Angela was good and sweet—and certainly did not deserve a slap in the face from anyone.

"Yes—I got over it," Honey Lou said. "I never should have touched those drinks of yours. I'm not used to alcohol and even those two little glasses did for me. I haven't seen Mr. Wallack since that night. I reckon he was awfully disgusted with me."

Her voice was wistful and the wide-set velvety brown eyes were wistful, too as she looked at the other girl.

Angela shook her head.

"Of course, he wasn't disgusted with you," she answered. "He knew you never had drunk before. I told him so. I told him you had only had two tiny drinks. I fixed it up for you with him."

She smiled at Honey Lou as she spoke—a sweet, innocent, gentle smile. And it never occurred to Honey Lou that she might not be telling the truth.

"I'm coming down here some day to get you to have lunch with me," she went on. "Will you come?"

Her dove-like eyes were soft and appealing above her dark furs, and she held out one white-gloved hand to Honey Lou in the friendliest sort of way.

"I'd love to," Honey Lou answered, suddenly feeling happy and warm as she always did when people were nice to her and met her half way.

She shook Angela's hand, and backed away from the car. "I hope you'll have a very merry Christmas [illegible] when [illegible] out of the [illegible]

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

DON'T FORCE YOUR PET TOPICS ON YOUR FRIENDS

You often talk about yourself and your own interests but you don't like to listen to the other person's [illegible].

Do you not indicate your impatience when the other fellow talks?

Too often you talk of family matters, family incidents that you think are exceptional in comparison to others, when, as a matter of fact, they are not only ordinary, but dull and uninteresting.

Then you wonder why you are not more popular.

If you would stop long enough to figure the thing out, you might realize that others don't want you to monopolize the conversation.

But no, you must match up every statement they make and add a lot more for good measure. And that's when you become tiresome.

Everyone does not care about matters in which your family figured prominently, or in which you yourself took an active part.

Your favorite subject, and the one toward which you try to direct conversation, is becoming a bore to your friends.

Have hobbies, but don't force them on others.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE FLOWER HUNTER

By Merlyn Swift

ELIZABETH RAND [illegible] among the flowers.

"[illegible] you would be content to spend all your life in a little cabin up here on the hills? You never long to get out into the real life of the world [illegible] means conflict, struggle [illegible]. Don't you ever feel that the world is your heritage . . . a [illegible] I grant you [illegible] You dodge its responsibilities by living . . . among flowers?"

John Grantley smiled tolerantly at Elizabeth's young enthusiasm. Grantley was a blonde, thin young fellow. He wore glasses and there were many wrinkles about his eyes; yet, for all that, he [illegible] much younger than he really was.

"So you think it is not a man's place . . . among the flowers, Miss Rand? I am sort of a slacker [illegible] is that it? Every man must live his own life. I do not say that mine will always be like this . . . up here in the quiet hills, away from the cities and their crowds. [illegible] are not all [illegible] flowers."

They were [illegible] on the grass in front of the mountain cabin, where Elizabeth, staying at the [illegible] house of the Simonds family, [illegible] two miles down the mountain, often came to talk to the [illegible] young man whom people called The Flower Hunter.

"Early in the Fall," continued Grantley, "I shall leave here unhappy, unless—unless [illegible], dearest, I love you. I want you. To me you are a lovely rose, with a rose's freshness and fragrance and color. Won't you marry me?"

Elizabeth drew her hand from his. She had often wondered what she would do if this man proposed to her. She would laugh, she used to tell herself. It would be too ridiculous. She, a senior at Vanstone, just a year away from her degree, proposed to by a rather skinny, bespectacled, sunburned, lovable young man who lived in a crazy cabin banked by flowers, bloomers indeed of countless variety and [illegible].

But when the proposal [illegible] did not laugh. No real [illegible] laugh at the sincerity [illegible] love of Grantley. [illegible] searched her proud face [illegible] ing to read his happiness in its depths.

"Marry you!" Elizabeth [illegible] in her heart that she cared [illegible]. But it was all so impossible. Her parents would never consent to the match. They were rich folk, filled with pride of race, certainly not the kind to sanction their only daughter's marriage to a poor young man who had confessed to her in a moment of weakness that he supported himself by writing little things about flowers. It was taken for granted by Elizabeth's family and friends that she would marry Pierce Regan, a senior at Wadham, one of her own "set." Pierce was coming up to visit the Simonds that very afternoon; no doubt he had arrived by now, was waiting while she was sitting on the cool grass in the shadow of a flowering rose-bush listening to a proposal of marriage.

"I could never marry you, John. I am sorry, . sorry this happened. We were such good friends, and I [illegible] to come and visit you and [illegible] here among the blooms."

[illegible] gently, so kindly, as Elizabeth told him the [illegible] that stood in the way of their union.

He [illegible] patiently, a whimsical [illegible].

"[illegible] overcome all your [illegible], Elizabeth? Tell me. Do you care for me at all? If I leave the flowers, go out into your world of contact," He shuddered and sniffed [illegible] at a rose. "would [illegible] could I hope to win you? You have another year at Vanstone, you tell me. At the end of that time, "

"But Pierce Regan. We have been intended for each other since childhood. Pierce is a fine chap. Why, here he comes now."

A gray roadster was crawling up the mountain road from the great white pile of the Simons house far below them.

"He is coming for you," said Grantley, looking away from her, toying with the bud in his hand. "I'm sorry if I have spoiled our friendship, Elizabeth. I was sort of a fool to hope that you . . that you could love a [illegible] flower hunter."

His words were not bitter. There was a hint of sorrow about his [illegible]. Elizabeth's heart ached for him. What was she losing? Did she really care for him? Certainly she wasn't in love with Pierce. The gray car came nearer.

"I must say good-bye to you. [illegible] of you, Elizabeth, as a pure white [illegible] of you, Elizabeth, as a pure white rose. We may meet again. Yes, I feel sure that we shall meet again and let it be as friends. Will you keep this for remembrance?" He kissed the rose and gave it to her.

Elizabeth could have wept [illegible] for time, just a little time to think calmly. She did not want to leave him. It had been so lovely, so quiet among his flowers.

The thrum of Pierce Regan's engine came to their ears, borne on the scented wind.

"Good-bye, Elizabeth," said the Flower-Hunter. He had picked up her hat from the grass, a little white felt hat. He pressed it close before he handed it to her. "I'm going away in a few days. I may get off tomorrow. I shall never come back here. I could not bear it alone. [illegible] has come to mean too much to me [illegible]. I hope you will have a good year at Vanstone."

Pierce came up the path to the [illegible]. With a thrill of delight Elizabeth noticed that a girl waited in the car. Pierce was rather fond of Miss G[illegible].

"Hello, Beth," called Pierce; then [illegible] at Grantley he stopped in confusion.

"Why, hello, professor," he said like a [illegible] freshman. "I didn't know it was [illegible] you were working on your book. And is it true you are leaving our school for good to [illegible] at Vanstone?"

He [illegible] Elizabeth's puzzled [illegible].

"I guess Mr. Grantley has been spoofing you, Beth. He's good at that. He is the greatest botanist in the country. He's going to teach at your [illegible] next year. I suppose Mr. Grantley will have some senior classes and you might like—"

"Yes," said Elizabeth. "I—I think I may sign up with him."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

WHILE some women go to the altar for love, and others become brides for money, a lot of girls get married just so that they can have somebody to carry their Christmas bundles.

THEY take the wedding vows in order to control their own delivery department.

ONE woman said she didn't care whether her husband was handsome or not as long as his feet were good.

BEFORE she marries she puts him through a road test.

HE has to pass her banker's approval and be okayed by a chiropodist.

A HUSBAND with fallen arches is no good on bargain days.

ONE poor fellow says he has to carry so many bundles that his wife should have married a pack mule.

BUT the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should probably have stopped the wedding.

HUSBANDS, however, may be worked day and night and the auhorities can't interfere.

A CHICAGO man says he's lugged so many packages that he should have been married by Sears-Roebuck.

HIS wife has done so much shopping, she's worn out three husbands.

SHE gets them fast and kills them quick.

HER last husband went to the hospital the other day and had seventeen bundles cut out.

WHEN a fellow goes shopping with his wife nowadays he has as much chance of coming home empty as a one-legged man has of kicking himself in the shins.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or clarified honey. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and it is splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BE still, dear men, and cease repining!

Woman may cut off hair, wear your trousers, pinch your cigarettes, share your vote, and steal your job—but you will always have the WHIP-HAND over her! In the last analysis, you will be able to dictate terms to her. You will always run the world!

Why? Because woman cannot live without Love! And, YOU, alas, are all that she has to love!

• • •

Women MUST have love—even though she seems to be going the wrong way to get it!

• • •

Love is woman's life-study, for which she "preps" at sixteen, and from which she graduates at twenty-two, with a post-graduate course lasting as long as life, itself!

• • •

With woman, Love is a career in itself—and she allows NOTHING serious to interfere with it. She may go in for music, art, law, business, or medicine; but they are all side-lines—just little running accompaniments to the real motif of her life.

• • •

She may resort to an artistic or professional career while she is waiting for the fruition of her Life's Dream, or she may turn to it in despair after that dream has been shattered. But it will always remain an AVOCATION—something to employ her mind and ergies while she is "marking time," and searching the horizon for the coming of the Great Experience.

• • •

The may make a bigger success of her art or her profession than she does of love; it may amuse and even exhilarate her, to see how far she can go in her chosen work—but it can never satisfy and JUSTIFY her, as can one perfect love—one complete conquest over the Right Man!

• • •

To a man, one the other hand, Love is merely a diverting avocation to be enjoyed in his leisure hours, after the stress of business or sport, and not interfere with more serious things.

Like most avocations, it occupies only his evenings and his idle hours. It is a form of relaxation—a diversion when he is successful, and a resource when he is discouraged or disheartened. Love may be to him an inspiration; is may even be one of his HOBBIES—but it is never a goal!

• • •

Love, with women, is an abiding thought. NOTHING can crowd it out! With man, it is just a transient mood, dispelled by the demands of things more vital to him, such as signing a big contract, making a good score or even consuming a perfect beefsteak.

• • •

And just so long as Love is a necessity to woman and a mere luxury to man, Adam can keep Eve jumping through hoops and feeding him applesauce!

• • •

Alas, in the Game of Life, the cards are all stacked against her—by Old Dame Nature!

To All Who Suffer Stomach Agony, Gas and Indigestion

Boston Druggists Make This Offer

Money Back If One Bottle of Dare's Mentha Pepsin Doesn't Do You More Good Than Anything You Ever Used

At last the way has been found to combine Pepsin with other corrective stomach agents so that it will do the most good in the shortest possible time.

Why bother with slow actors when one tablespoonful of this splendid and pleasant liquid remedy will cause gas, bloating heaviness, heartburn or any upset condition of the stomach to speedily vanish.

And why should any man or woman suffer another hour with indigestion or any stomach misery when the remedy that acts almost instantly can be easily procured?

But there is more to say about this remarkable remedy—something that will interest thousands of despondent people.

Dare's Mentha Pepsin not only quickly relieves stomach distress, but it also conquers stubborn indigestion, dyspepsia and gastritis, and puts an end to dizziness, nervousness, headache, sleeplessness and despondency, which distressing troubles are nearly always caused by chronic stomach disturbance.

Dare's Mentha Pepsin is pleasant to take, has a delightfully refreshing taste and after it has put your stomach in a clean and healthy condition, just notice how much better you look and feel, for besides correcting stomach disorders this supremely good remedy that druggists everywhere guarantee, is a fine tonic that builds you up and makes you work with vim, eat with relish and sleep soundly.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy don't-care feeling no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c, 30c, 60c.

MR. CHAS. McINNES, 61 WHITE ST., E. BOSTON, MASS., SAYS:—"I had trouble with my stomach for a year. My appetite was good, but what I ate did not digest but would lay on stomach, ferment and cause gas, bloating and belching. I would get dizzy and sometimes had headaches. I had been treated by several doctors who did me no permanent good. I read of Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., and had him treat me, and I am so pleased with what he did for me I am glad to recommend him to all who suffer from stomach trouble."

MR. JOHN M. WHEATON, 72 CENTER ST., LYNN, MASS., says:—"I had stomach trouble for the past two years, so severe that would be doubled up with pain. What I ate did not agree with me but would cause distress. I was constipated and had frequent headaches. I had been treated by different doctors but could get no relief from their treatment. I read so much of DANIEL J. WALSH, M. D., and his remarkable success with chronic troubles that I consulted him and his treatment has made me feel so well that I have no hesitation in recommending DANIEL J. WALSH, M. D., to all who suffer as I did."

MR. W. R. STEWART, 18a WEBSTER ST., ATLANTIC, MASS., SAYS:—"I had suffered from stomach trouble for three years. I felt so bad that I will not attempt to describe my symptoms. St. Peter and the Kranich & Bach Piano!

It was a dream. There was this old man clad in a long woolen garment with a big key attached to his girdle. "What do you wish with me? What can I say to you?" "Sire, tell me the name of the best Piano made in America." He fumbled his key, and said, "I think I can unlock the secret. Take the first letters of the two books most widely read in all the world." He then vanished. Well, the two books are the Koran and the Bible. K. and B. Kranich & Bach, and that is the answer.

Do not fail to see the Kranich & Bach Piano. It does not seem humanely possible to make it better. Good for a lifetime. It is a joy, has a marvellous tone, and is very beautiful. A liberal allowance for the old piano. Convenient monthly payments. Do not forget that we have exquisite small apartment Grands for $625.00. The great Autopiano. Many slightly used player-pianos at a great saving.

"Good Will to Men"---

But Not to Poor Widows and Hungry, Ill-Clad Babies

If ever an unwise, unseasonable, ill-judged and altogether stupid course was entered upon by a public body supposed to represent the people of Boston it is that which is instituted by the Overseers of the Public Welfare.

With the snow already eight inches deep on the ground, and with a hundred Santa Clauses hard at work preparing for one of the gladdest holidays of all the year, these Overseers announce a REDUCTION OF ONE DOLLAR in the weekly dole which heretofore has been paid to each of TWO THOUSAND needy families.

The step is "made necessary," we are told by the reporters, "because already this year $1,750,000 has been spent on relief."

What sort of public servants are they who dispense the public funds with such liberality in a New England Summer that they must pinch and screw and dole with sparing hand in the bleak and biting days of Winter?

And what sort of ADVERTISING is this, for humane and benevolent Boston? What a message to send to the world!

Apparently all that was changed when the Overseers of the Poor became the Overseers of Public Welfare, was the NAME. However noble their aim, and however good their intention, these four ladies and eight gentlemen have struck a peculiarly sour note in the midst of Christmas carols; have selected what should be a cheerful and a happy season, as the time to send a chilling message of despondency into twenty hundred poor homes.

Already, we may be sure, the wires have carried to the far corners of the country the "news" that proud old Boston, once rich and always philanthropic, is in such a bad way financially that she is compelled to pinch pennies from the envelopes of her poor.

That "news" will be read and discussed to our detriment in a thousand places which may never hear a word of the NEW Boston's new and REAL prosperity.

His Honor the Mayor and the gentlemen of the City Council should act in this matter AT ONCE.

If more money IS needed, for the poor of Boston, more money should be provided.

And, whatever may have been the motive for this muddle-headed attack from the rear, the persons responsible should not be permitted to remain upon any public board representing the City of Boston any longer than the law compels.

When His Rear Light Is Out

Why Give the INNOCENT Motorist a "Criminal" Record?

The suggestion that driving a motorcar with its rear light out shall be looked upon in Massachusetts hereafter as a civil, rather than criminal, offense, will be well received by motorists and will be looked upon by citizens in general as in line with plain common sense.

The recommendation is contained in the annual report of the Judicial Council of Massachusetts, which has been considering "inadvertent and careless BUT UNINTENTIONAL violations of a MINOR character."

Urging that all MINOR violations of automobile and traffic laws be considered as transgressions of the CIVIL statutes, the Council suggests that the driver whose rear light is out, for example, shall be handed a summons by the alert policeman.

Responding to this summons, the offending motorist will proceed to the office of the clerk of the District Court and there make a "non-committal" payment of five or ten dollars, in addition to a small recording fee. At present, he goes into the "criminal" court and what he pays is a "fine."

If the laws are amended in accordance with the Council's recommendations, every operator of a car will carry his "driving record" on the back of his license. On this record policemen will describe the nature of each and every violation. It will also bear the signature or receipt of the clerk of the District Court for each payment, as described.

But suppose the motorist to be an HABITUAL offender?

The Judicial Council has considered him, also, and in the event of a SEVENTH offense within a license year would suspend the license for either six months or the balance of the year.

Such a change in the law, the Judicial Council believes, would be a great relief to the courts as well as to motorists.

It WOULD be a great relief to the courts, and not only that but, in the opinion of the Boston Evening American, a decided step in the right direction.

What with all the things that the law now considers criminal a man may become a criminal while he waits. A few UNINTENTIONAL missteps and he becomes the possessor of a criminal "record," so-called. Well, paste a criminal record below a decent citizen's name and he MAY try to live down to it.

We cannot see wherein the amendments proposed by the Judicial Council "let down the bars" or infringe upon the rights of anyone. We hope the Governor, in his wisdom, will send them along to the new Legislature with the recommendation that the accompanying bill "ought to pass."

Advice for Parents

During over twenty years' experience as a children's photographer, a specialist has been evolving a set of rules for parents.

He has condensed them to four:

1—Give a child only one toy at a time. That teaches concentration.

2—Give the child an affirmative viewpoint. Stop saying "don't."

3—Lead rather than drive a child. The stubborn, stupid child is the driven child.

4—Cultivate powers of imitation. Most parents do such a poor job of imitating dogs and horses and kittens that children early learn to despise their efforts.

VISITING NURSE IS MERCY ANGEL

By DR. FRANK CRANE

PROBABLY the most important way in which modern medical service differs from what it used to be is nursing.

Almost all of the actual contacts with the patient and the care for the patient are by the nurse.

She works under the direction of the doctor, of course, but a large part of the efficiency of the doctor's care rests upon her shoulders.

That she is hard-working, faithful and patient goes without saying.

Much credit is due to the Visiting Nurses' Organization whose members go into the houses of the poor and instruct them in proper sanitation.

They do much for the prevention of disease as well as in caring for the sick when they are stricken.

The Visiting Nurse Service of the Henry Street Settlement in New York is making a drive for a million dollars—$500,000 for an endowment, and $500,000 toward the maintenance of the Service.

The two hundred self-sacrificing nurses now engaged in their work made 235,537 visits during the first eight months of this year; 39,939 visits were made to the health centres for examination and advice; 3,897 mothers received help and instruction at pre-natal clinics, and 1,340 children attended pre-school clinics.

These figures may not be very interesting, but they show an immense amount of work done by these women and work that surely calls for the co-operation of all who are interested in the welfare of mankind.

There may be some question about this or that charity, but there can be no question about alleviating the pains of a man that is sick or preventing his sickness.

Without regard to race or creed or color they respond to the call of humanity and willingly devote themselves to its service.

If the people can pay for the service they may, but if not the service is free.

Thirty-three years ago this work was started by Miss Lillian Wald and her influence still counts.

Odds and Ends of the Town

FELLOW TOWNSMEN

JUDGE WILFORD GRAY made a very favorable impression on lawyers, newspapermen and spectators at the trial of DR. THOMAS E. WALSH in the EDITH GREENE death case. He proved himself a notable addition to the Superior Court bench.

"I see you're trying before a fellow townsman from WOBURN," remarked a lawyer friend to ATTORNEY JOHN P. FEENEY, counsel for DR. WALSH.

"Yes, WILFORD GRAY a good fellow and a good judge. And by the way I had the honor of handing WILFORD his high school diploma while serving as MAYOR of our home town," replied JOHN P.

ECHOES OF SUMMER.

Commuters at WOLLASTON station whose toes tingled while waiting for their customary rattler were cheered a bit by this sign on a billboard against which drifts were piled four feet high:

"Beautify your lawns by keeping your lawn mower sharpened."

BACK BAYITE NOW.

ATTORNEY JOHN P. FEENEY, cross-examining JAMES V. FORD, in the EDITH GREENE death case, asked:

"Didn't you give that interview at the home of your counsel, ATTORNEY FRANK FORD in SOUTH BOSTON?"

"At his home in the Back Bay," replied the witness

"Well, FRANK FORD'S home in the Back Bay, then, and not SOUTH BOSTON."

Attorney FRANCIS J. W. FORD, the former HARVARD track star, joined the mirth stirred by ATTORNEY FEENEY'S emphasis on his shift in residence.

HUSTLER.

Speaking of snow, CITY COUNCILLOR FRED DOWLING of BRIGHTON claims that TOM BURKE, foreman of the BRIGHTON yard of the Public Works Department, is a wonder at clearing snow from the cross-walks, streets and gutters, with the limited number of men he has under him. "BURKE works while the other fellow sleeps," says DOWLING. "He is a good example for other city foremen to emulate." Well, FRED ought to know. He has represented BRIGHTON in the Legislature and knows how to get things done.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Hardly any other member of the CITY GOVERNMENT can boast of more street improvements in his district than CITY COUNCILLOR HERMAN L. BUSH, of Ward 12, ROXBURY. The new pavements in Blue Hill avenue, Warren, Hutchins, Townsend, Dale, Cliff, Waverly and Garden streets in that district are due to the tireless efforts of the councillor. He has already started a drive for better lighting service to eliminate the old gas lights and install electric arc lamps.

MARTIN M.

"Apparently MARTIN LOMASNEY doesn't trust the denizens of COMMONWEALTH AVENUE," a political wag remarked.

"He never did. But why do you speak of it?" his friend questioned.

"Oh, no special reason. But several nights since the Mahatma moved out to BROTHER JOE'S flat in AUDUBON ROAD, I've seen MARTIN walking home through COMMONWEALTH AVENUE. And each time he was accompanied by a bodyguard."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"DID you read those love letters Valentino wrote to the girl he didn't marry?" asks Mr. Eugene Morril.

"I didn't think much of Valentino during his life,' he continues. "I don't care for movies, and this sheik stuff seems asinine. I thought of him as a professional male beauty and that was all. But after I read those letters I changed my mind. That man was a deep thinker and he hit straight at a problem which is bothering a lot of other men nowadays.

"The letters I refer to were to Peggy Scott, the English girl, who killed herself when he died. He loved her. And she loved him. It wasn't a light sort of love. She was crazy about him. She wanted him to marry her so that she could feel he belonged to her. She had all the exalted ideas about marriage that devoted women are supposed to have. And that was just the trouble. She thought those ideas were fine, but Valentino didn't. He said they were ruinous to love.

"He hated this possessive attitude women have about love — the way they want to own and manage their husbands. He said it was that attitude that had wrecked his two marriages and that would prevent him from marrying Pola Negri or any other woman. In one letter he wrote—'It would have been better had you been content to let things run on as they were, being happy children, but I suppose it is not in the heart of women to let well enough alone. I dare say that the mother lust is strong in all the sex and you are slaves of yourselves and your mates for a home and future generations.'

Loved Children.

"Valentino didn't object to children or marriage. He loved children passionately and tried marriage twice. But it was the way a wife insisted on dominating every corner of a man's life and constantly intruding her love and demands that he couldn't stand. He said once: 'Woman would indeed be a treasure if we could enjoy her society when it is welcome and good for us and be rid of it when we must attend to other things and her presence is a confusion and a nuisance. If woman could only be parked or garaged like a car when it is not needed But no; after marriage, she develops a genius for blowing her horn at the wrong moments as if trying to make us hate her.'

"That statement certainly appealed to me, for it exactly fits my own case, Elsie. No man ever loved his wife more than I did when I married. I love her yet, but sometimes I wonder how long it will last. I am a young lawyer. My wife and I met when we were both in college. She was a very ambitious girl without any particular talent, but a keen desire to take part in modern life. I have no objection to that. I admire a woman who takes an interest in affairs outside the home. The thing I object to is when a wife tries to make a profession out of running her husband.

"At first my wife wasnt so bad, for she was wrapped up in the excitement of having a home and of having our first two babies. But we have been married seven years now and the novelty of that has worn off. And now she insists on meddling with my affairs. She insists on calling me up at my office and dropping in at unexpected times. She wants to know every detail of what I am doing and accuses me of lack of love if I don't tell her.

I DO THIS BECAUSE I LOVE YOU, DEAR
ELSIE ROBINSON

Same Problem.

"She is always suggesting new ways of doing things. She particularly tries to push me in a social way and is always making dates which she thinks will help me. I have explained to her repeatedly that although I love her and need her very much, I am quite capable

"Nearly all my professional career, but it makes no difference to her.

"Nearly all my profesional friends have this same problem in their homes. Six of us have gone together for years—two doctors, two lawyers, a dentist and a newspaper man. Each one of us married a college girl, and each one is struggling with the same situation. I know scores more such cases amongst my clients. I guess the truth is that our wives haven't really enough to do, or else they don't find housekeeping and children interesting enough. And college made them restless to making a place for themselves in the world. So they are trying to do it by running their husbands' lives for them.

"I wish you would publish this. Elsie. It might make some of these restless, meddlesome wives stop and think what they are doing."

Easiest Way to Measure

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

AMERICAN schools teach the metric system of weights and measures, as well as the English system, but, except by those going into scientific pursuits, the metric system is little used in this country after school days and is often practically forgotten.

Yet no one can conveniently read scientific works without a knowledge of the metric measures sufficient to enable him to visualize the meter, the kilometer, the millimeter and the centimeter, to speak only of measures of length.

Unless one can see a meter with his mind's eye, as he sees a yard or a foot, he must translate it into English measure, with no negligible trouble, before it has a definite meaning for him.

So, he must see a kilometer in terms of a mile and a centimeter in terms of an inch in order to really comprehend their significance.

Persons who left school during the early years of the present generation are almost always confused when they read, for instance, that the height of Mount Everest is 8,850 meters, that the distance from the earth to the sun is 149,504,201 kilometers and that the velocity of light is 299,860 kilometers per second.

And, in order to clarify their ideas, it is more trouble than many care to take to multiply the number of meters by 3.28 in order to turn it into its equivalent in feet, or the number of kilometers, by 0.6214 to find the number of miles. And the case becomes worse when square or cubic feet or kilometers are in question.

Science has too thoroughly learned the enormous advantages of the metric system to ever abandon it; and more and more, as scientific discovery advances and knowledge accumulates, the necessity of a thorough training in the use of that system, as well out of school as in school, will be felt.

An illustration of the loss required of those who have to pass by laborious calculations from the metric to the English system of units in order to obtain a clear idea of scientific progress, is furnished by a presentment which I have just seen of the whole gamut of wave lengths of radiant energy as at present known. It goes without saying that this is given in metric units.

There are shown no less than sixty octaves extending in unbroken succession from the "gamma rays" at one end to the ultra-Hertzian waves at the other. They are all expressed in multiples and sub-multiples of the meter. To one familiar with that system it is merely a matter of multiplying or dividing by 10, by 100, by 1,000, to see clearly the regular progress from the most minute to the most gigantic of the undulations that constitute the living universe.

The X-rays near the short-wave end ranges from less than thirty thousand-millionths to above a thousand thousand-millionths of a millimeter in length. Without a break the steadily increasing wave-lengths then pass into the region of the ultra-violet and then that of visible light.

The latter ceases when the wave-lengths approach to thousandths of a millimeter, to be succeeded by the waves of the infra-red and of radiant heat.
